The Washington Riots. Surprise for Joe Angelo. Women Have Courage. Some Russian Shooting.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

WASHINGTON NEWS, describing American soldiers using force and tear gas, to drive veterans of the World War from their encampments at the capital, is disquieting.

No one will suggest that the country's laws should be ignored or set aside, even for men that have fought for their country.

But all wish that a difficult situation might have been handled more satisfactorily, on both sides.

CURIOUS THINGS happen in war and in peace that follows. You have heard of Joe Angelo, of Camden, N. J. In the big war Joe Angelo was aide to Maj. George O. Patton, in charge of light tanks.

One night, on a patrol, Patton was badly wounded by a shell fragment. Angelo dragged him to safety in a shell hole, stayed with him all night.

ANGELO WAS decorated for his courage, but learned that there is little nourishment in decorations. He was in Washington, looking for a job or payment of his bonus, and it became the duty of Maj. Patton, now in the United States Cavalry, to drive Joe Angelo, with other veterans, out of their Washington quarters in Camp Marks.

CALLING OUT the Army to burn the camps of the "bonus army" and drive the veterans out with cavalry, machine guns, infantry, tanks and gas attacks, will supply what is called "extreme radicalism" with texts for many a day.

Calling out the army has happened rarely in Washington. It occurred during the "whisky rebellion" in 1794, and can happen hereafter only by direct order of the President.

THICK-NECKED MEN, and the conceited kind with thin necks, used to say:

"Women must not vote, because they lack the courage of us men."

They vote now and every day prove that they have more courage than "us men."

You realize it when you read about Miss Earhart crossing the Atlantic alone, or the two lady pilots, Mrs. Marcells, of Centerville, Miss., and Miss Phaden, of Baltimore, going up to beat the women's non-stop flying mark of 120 hours.

WOMEN'S REAL every day courage is not recognized.

Yesterday, in the thick traffic of Lafayette street, New York, a middle-aged woman sailed along, dodging heavy trucks and big fast cars, sitting in a little "bath tub" side car of a three-wheeled motorcycle. A boy of 16 drove it, another younger boy sat back of his brother, talking to his grandmother.

SHE POINTED out the interesting sights and queer people, waved her arms, turned her head, skimming at high speed within a few inches of truck wheels. The boys had said:

"It is perfectly safe, grandma."

And for her it was perfectly safe.

You, proud man, would not have taken her place for the real estate that she passed on her swift career, if all the great companies in America had insured you. But her grandsons had said it was safe, and so it was safe. She wore black silk, and an old-fashioned hat. May she live long, to defy the fates.

AMERICANS HAVE been assured that Russia has no respect for women, their rights, or the sacred marriage tie, but certain young Russian hoodlums have not found it so. Following mistreatment of a young girl, four of them have been shot, eight sent to jail for long terms. And no protests or weeping could save them.

FORMER KING MANUEL, kicked out of Portugal by subjects tired of monarchy, goes back to be buried there, carried on a ship with the Portuguese flag at half-mast. No country objects to the presence of a dead ruler.

When Napoleon's body was brought from St. Helena, to be buried under the gilt dome of Les Invalides on the edge of the Seine, enthusiasm was so great you might have thought he was a Frenchman, instead of an Italian, from Corsica. It was said:

"If he had returned to life, he would have slept in the Tuileries that night."

JEAN BOROTRA, veteran French tennis player, yesterday defeated Ellsworth Vines, the nineteen-year-old Californian who had carried everything before him in England.

News reports describes the crowd of ten thousand Frenchmen "almost hysterical in their delight when their champion won."

French, men and women, can play tennis, or anything else that demands great nervous energy. Lenglen, Borotra, Cochet, all prove it.

But if the California boy, Vines, keeps his health, and continues to improve, he will be the world champion in a year or two, as Helen Wills Moody, of California, is woman champion today.

CHICAGO'S JUDGE TRUDE, by implication, approves birth control, and is first with a judicial decision to that effect. He made a husband pay his wife separate maintenance. She did not want any more children, and the judge agreed with her that the existing number, five, was too many.

This would interest the mothers of Napoleon, Marconi and Caruso, whose families numbered from about a dozen to nineteen.

MEGAN LLOYD GEORGE
Daughter of Great Britain's war-time premier, David Lloyd George, whose arm was fractured today when she slipped and fell in the garden of her London home.

GAS QUELLS BOY GUN FIGHTER

An 18-year-old boy who went on rampage in his home in Coraopolis late yesterday fired four shots at two policemen sent to arrest him, they reported.

Barricading himself at the top of a stairway in his three-story home at Fifth avenue and Locust streets, Coraopolis, police said, the youth, Earl Shoff, 18, was routed by a tear gas bomb.

He retreated to the rooftop where he was arrested by Police Chief Joseph Seara, of Coraopolis. Shoff, Seara said, had a gun with four discharged shells and a loaded one in its chambers when arrested.

The policemen fired upon were Patrolmen Henry Rhodes and Joseph Conway. They went to Shoff's home to investigate a report that the boy, armed with a knife, had gone on a rampage.

As they entered the doorway, Shoff fled to the third floor. As the police followed, he turned and fired four shots at them, they said. The bullets missed them by inches.

Floyd Gibbons Pays City Short Visit

Floyd Gibbons, famed war correspondent, paid Pittsburgh a fleeting visit today.

He was en route from Cleveland to Washington, making the trip by air. The plane, carrying four other passengers in addition to Gibbons, landed at the county airport at 10:25 a. m. and took off a few minutes afterward.

Mellon on Way Home Stops in Capital

Arrival of Andrew W. Mellon, ambassador to England, in Pittsburgh on a vacation trip, expected yesterday, has been delayed a day or two, it was reported at the family residence here today. The former Secretary of the Treasury went to Washington immediately upon his arrival from England.

Sonnenberg, Ill, Seized For Quiz on Auto Death

LAWRENCE, Mass., July 30.—(INS.)—Arrested as he arose from his sick bed at his home in Belmont, Gus Sonnenberg, former world's heavyweight wrestling champion and ex-Dartmouth College football star, was brought here by automobile today and before District Court Judge Frederic N. Chandler, pleaded not guilty to charges growing out of the fatal injuries in an automobile accident to Patrolman Richard L. Morrisey, of the Lawrence police.

The case was continued until Tuesday, August 2. He was allowed to depart from court in the $2,000 bond furnished by Paul Bowser, wrestling promoter.

VOLPE DEATH CLUES BARE RUM WAR

More Shootings Feared To Avenge Murder Of Three Brothers

The bullet-riddled bodies of three of the racketeering Volpe brothers lay side by side in a Wilmerding funeral parlor today, a curious spectacle to hundreds, while the police sought vainly for their slayers.

No one doubted the theory that Johnny Volpe, the dapper boss of the booze racket, and his younger brothers, Arthur and Jimmy, had been "rubbed out" of this world because they tried to muscle into the territory of other racketeers, but, beyond a theory, the police seemed to have made little progress.

VOLPES NOT QUESTIONED

None of the remaining Volpes had been questioned by detectives today, almost 24 hours after the massacre, neither had ownership of the murder car been traced, although the police learned that the dark blue Ford sedan had been shipped from the Ford factory at Dearborn to a Cleveland agency.

If there were any spectators to the triple slaying in the Rome coffee shop at 704 Wylie avenue—Volpe racket headquarters—the police had not found them today, with the exception of Sam Bazzano, an employe there. And Bazzano was mum. All he would say was:

"They were all my pals. I don't know who the men were who killed them."

Bazzano's brother, John, nominal owner of the coffee shop in which the massacre was executed, couldn't be found today, Lieut. Frank Ferris, of the Homicide Squad declared, but an hour later Bazzano's attorney, Frank Zappala, promised to produce his client for questioning. Bazzano was out of the city when the shooting occurred, Zappala said.

Detective Lieut. Frank Ferris, of the homicide squad, says this is why the Volpes were slain:

RACKET MOB BLAMED

"I believe the Volpes held a meeting at 704 Wylie avenue, yesterday afternoon. During this meeting, an imported mob, hired by local racketeers to wipe out the Volpes, because they were 'muscling in' on too much territory in this district, put the boys on the spot.

"The local boys were afraid the Volpes would, within a short time, have full control of Pittsburgh rackets. They knew that, if that were so, the dead men wouldn't hesitate to exterminate opposition. Hence the killing."

Police Inspector Harry Mellon, however, has another theory:

"The Volpes, I think, were killed by a local mob. They either double-crossed some of their friends in refusing to pay off or else their enemies were jealous of them. I believe one of Volpe's alleged friends wanted to become the power of the gang and put them on the spot."

WOMAN WITNESS

Besides Bazzano, the police had only Mrs. Antoinette Terraro, of 105 Elm street, to look to for help apparently. Held as as a material witness, she was released on her promise to appear today for questioning.

It was against her that the dying Johnny Volpe staggered just

Olympic Game Opening Draws 100,000 to Bowl

By WALLACE X. RAWLES
International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, July 30.—Eyes of the world today were focused on Los Angeles where more than 100,000 persons are assembled to usher in the most spectacular event of Southern California's history—the tenth Olympiad.

This was the opening day of a 16-day program of events for athletic supremacy among 1,800 athletes of 48 nations and to honor this cast of a mighty peacetime pageant had come lords, princes and counts, turbaned representatives of India, a uniformed general of the new Polish republic, the Vice President of the United States, senators and congressmen and other sports lovers from the far corners of the earth.

ATHLETES NERVOUS

Star athletes were nervous at the zero hour as officials prepared to lift the curtain at Olympic Stadium on the gigantic spectacle.

All 105,000 tickets for the opening ceremony, the parade of nations, today, have been sold.

Officials estimated that more than one-half million persons would witness the games, or some parts of them.

Excited crowds thronged the streets. Hotel lobbies were filled—and still they came, by airplane, steamship, train and automobile—all for a single purpose, to cheer an unprecedented display of athletic strength and power, to witness the making of international sport history and to enjoy royal entertainment.

Joining the crowds were thousands of fez-topped Shriners who on Thursday closed their national convention at San Francisco.

U. S. NET ACES HELD EVEN

ROLAND GARROS STADIUM, PARIS, July 30.—Outclassing their French rivals in the matter of teamwork, the American team of John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison won the first set at 6-3 in their match with Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon in the doubles competition of the Davis Cup tennis challenge round here today.

The Frenchmen rallied to win the second set, 13-11.

The French won both singles matches yesterday, and need only one more victory to retain the trophy.

A capacity crowd of 10,000 fans witnessed the match. The demand for tickets was so great that Dwight Davis, donor of the cup, had some difficulty getting in, and then a seat had to be made for him on the sidelines with Bernon S. Prentice, the American captain.

U. S., FRANCE AGREE ON PACT

Plan Calls for Debt Slash Linked to Arms Reduction

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service.

PARIS, July 30.—The United States and France have reached an agreement in principle providing for reduction of war debts in exchange for armament reduction, International News Service learned on reliable authority today.

Strictest secrecy surrounds the agreement, but International News Service was informed that American officials took the initiative and elicited a promise from France to reduce her arms in accordance with the Hoover disarmament plan, provided the United States in turn agrees to slash the war debts.

Detailed negotiations will take place at a future conference in Paris, Washington or London.

Meantime, United States Ambassador Walter E. Edge and Premier Edouard Herriot agreed to continue disarmament discussions in Paris simultaneously with commercial negotiations.

The plan calls for the war debt cut to go through after the American presidential elections in November.

Groundwork for the disarmament-war debt "bargain" was laid at an important luncheon at the foreign office yesterday, attended by Norman Davis, expert on the American disarmament delegation; Premier Herriot, Finance Minister Louis Germain-Martin and members of the American embassy staff.

Hoover's Use of Army Against Vets Ranked As Sheer Stupidity

FOR SHEER STUPIDITY, President Hoover's spectacular employment of the military in evicting a mere handful of the derelicts of the World War from their wretched billets in Washington, is without parallel in American annals.

This is the least that may be said of the course the government decided to pursue at a moment when the problem of the remaining remnants of the "bonus army" at the capital was solving itself by peaceful and natural means.

If the idea had been to propagate the very radicalism and Bolshevism in this country, which the administration has been at such great pains to explain it sought to eradicate, it could have sought no better way of doing so.

THE WHOLE SITUATION could have been avoided in the first place if the government had paid the veterans their bonus.

The whole wretched and bloody incident could have been prevented if the government had paid the men what the government had admitted it owed them, and what it had promised to pay them at some later date.

There would have been no need of the torch and the sword, of rattling sabers in the streets of Washington, and the rumble of armored tanks in the shadow of the capitol, if the government had made good its promise to its veterans, and had given them what they needed, when they needed it most desperately.

But the government elected to pursue another course. Some thousands of ex-service men, in dire need, with almost child-like simplicity, sought their promised bonus in person, at the seat of the government.

Congress adjourned, leaving them with blasted hopes, and the greater part of them dispersed, and went to their homes.

THE RESPONSIBILITY, from the beginning, was a federal responsibility.

Congress evaded it for two months. President Hoover evaded it for two months. Then he acted in a manner which has amazed and stunned the entire country.

Mr. Hoover may explain why he suddenly ordered the employment of force. He may explain why a veteran was shot down.

But no true American, with gratitude in his heart for the veterans, taken by their government in their tender and immature years, and subjected to the demoralizing influence of war, will feel that such harsh measures were wholly justifiable.

No American, recalling the gallantry of these American boys on the field of battle, will feel that the course Mr. Hoover chose to pursue was the course that Lincoln or Jefferson would have followed.

Lincoln interposed the power the constitution gave him to save from the firing squad just such soldiers of the union.

All humanity has applauded Abraham Lincoln for his mercy and his sound good sense, and the nation has grown in greatness by his example.

THE NATION TODAY mourns not only the veteran slain in that historic avenue which so often has echoed to the footsteps of the heroes of the Republic, but it mourns something more, something deeper, and even more spiritual.

The nation, as it contemplates this sorry spectacle, mourns the passing of a simple and ancient American sentiment.

It mourns the extinguishment of principles fundamentally democratic.

The rattle of the saber in the quiet streets of Washington is calculated to arouse passions and

NEW SIEGE OF CAPITAL PLANNED

City's Business Men Protest 'Invasion' To McCloskey

By AL GOUGH,
Staff Correspondent.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 30.—Five hundred bedraggled veterans of the World War and the bonus march had lain their weary bodies down to rest in this hastily improvised field headquarters today.

Instead of demobilization as ordered by President Hoover, the veterans, grimly reminded of their defeat at the hands of Regular Army troops, set about with new determination to rally their scattered forces and return to their siege of Washington.

BUSINESS MEN PROTEST

All through the night ragged veterans trudged into the city amid the protests of an aroused city.

Fearful that a situation fraught with dramatic possibilities is rapidly developing, leaders of Johnstown's business men called upon Mayor Eddie McCloskey to halt the march on Johnstown.

Half a dozen indignation meetings were held by citizens last night and adopted resolutions denouncing their chief executive for having invited the army to Johnstown. They planned to carry their fight to high state officials, failing to obtain satisfaction from the Mayor.

Faced with this rising tide of hostility, the veterans' leaders telephoned W. W. Waters, commander-in-chief, and asked him to come here at once from Washington to aid in handling the situation. An airplane is being sent for him.

An editorial in the Johnstown Democrat today urged that if any considerable number of men congregate in Johnstown, the Governor should be asked to take immediate charge of the situation.

A field headquarters staff has been set up. At its head is Capt. Doak E. Carter, chief of staff of the Bonus Expeditionary Forces.

BERLIN FEARS HITLER ATTACK IF HE FAILS AT POLLS

CAPITAL HEARS NAZIS WILL STORM CITY

Entire Police Force Called on Eve of Reich Elections

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

BERLIN, July 30. — The entire Berlin police force, with all available reserves in service, went on a 48-hour extreme alarm footing at noon today as leaders of all political parties wound up their campaigns for tomorrow's national Reichstag elections.

Determined to maintain order at any cost, the police made this unusual precaution not only to prevent serious political outbreaks and possible clashes during the final campaign hours and during the balloting tomorrow, but also as an answer to persistent reports that Adolf Hitler's storm troops would march upon Berlin tomorrow night in the event the Nazis and the Nationalists failed to win a majority.

An added precautionary measure, also aimed at checking any attempt at violence which may have been planned by the Hitlerites, was an emergency decree signed by President Paul von Hindenburg declaring a 10-day political truce, beginning tomorrow.

The decree bans all indoor and outdoor political meetings and demonstrations and claps a complete ban on public party activities.

It was announced the decree would allow the various parties to negotiate calmly for a coalition during the days immediately following the election, since it is expected no one party will obtain a majority.

U. S. Hears Von Papen Cite Civil War Fear

By WILLIAM P. REED
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Civil war and the menace of Communism, both results of the weakening of Germany by the peace treaty of Versailles, have been averted by the new Reich dictatorship in Prussia, Chancellor Franz von Papen, of Germany, declared last night.

In a radio talk from Berlin, carried throughout the United States by the National Broadcasting Company the Chancellor reviewed the causes for the present Reich dictatorship, emphasizing that its purpose is primarily to establish order for the Reichstag elections tomorrow.

Chancellor von Papen was introduced by Karl H. von Wiegand, Universal Service Berlin correspondent, and Max Jordan, N. B. C. representative in Central Europe.

CIVIL WAR MENACE

The Chancellor said:

"The outside world does not quite realize Germany was endangered by the aspect of civil war.

"This was due to the growing tension between the adherents of the Extreme Right and those of the Extreme Left. While the National Socialist movement aspires to nothing but national regeneration, the Communists irect themselves against the cultural foundation of our national and social life.

"Communism must therefore be termed a revolutionary movement and a danger to this country and the world. Recent disorders were due, with very few exceptions, to their illegal activities.

AUTHORITY PERILED

"No government could have continued to tolerate this state of affairs if it was not to give up its own authority.

"The provisional regime instituted in Prussia by the appointment of a Reich commissioner was never meant to be of a permanent nature. It was nothing but a temporary arrangement to meet this emergency."

The Chancellor then reiterated previous denials of reports his government is intending to establish a dictatorship, following which he launched into a denunciation of the Versailles treaty.

WATERS SCORES WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(Universal.)—Walter W. Waters, commander of the routed bonus army, characterized a White House statement that the men driven out of town were Communists and not World War veterans as "a damned lie."

He added:

"Every man in the bonus expeditionary force is a war veteran. We examined the discharge papers and war records of every one of them."

The commander remained indignant over the fact that President Hover had called out troops against his forces. He said:

"The responsibility for Thursday's bloodshed is on Hoover's hands.

"But Hoover will not be President long. He has signed his political doom.

"Nominated at Chicago, Hoover was defeated Thursday at Anacostia."

Waters received a telegram from Doak Carter, his chief of staff, saying he had arrived in Johnstown, Pa., and that the arrangements there were "perfect."

sentiments heretofore foreign to the American tradition.

It precipitates into the quiet of American life something of the old world conflict between Communism and Fascism.

Such a course as the government has chosen to take will stimulate radicalism on the one hand, and the idea of dependence on the mailed fist upon the other.

If public sentiment should unhappily divide upon this line of cleavage, the very existence of the patriotic democratic and republican principles on which the nation was founded, would be threatened by something alien and of sinister import to the American ideal.

CONGRESS QUIZ ON VETS LOOMS

CHICAGO, July 30.—(INS.)—Representative A. J. Sabath, of Illinois, today announced he will ask a congressional investigation of the use of Army troops to clear Washington of bonus-seeking veterans.

The Congressman also said he has telegraphed Chairman John Barton Payne, of the American Red Cross, demanding that that organization supply food and shelter to any unemployed veterans and their families who might still be in the capital city. Sabath said:

"I am formulating a protest to President Hoover against the inhumane and brutal treatment of the ex-service men. I will demand congressional investigation. I am satisfied that the American people do resent such brutal and harsh action as has been taken by President Hoover."

BONUS VETS IN JOHNSTOWN

Rally Under M'Closkey For Return to Siege In Bonus Fight

Last night, from the office of the Mayor of Johnstown, Carter issued orders and commands in true military fashion. From among the straggling refugees he selected his aides, naming John F. Newlin, F. G. Yotter, Matthew Burke and R. B. Ellison.

LACK FOOD, CLOTHING

The most serious problem facing the newly organized army here is lack of food and clothing. In an appeal sent out by Capt. Carter last night, the plight of men, women and children was characterized as "the most serious crisis Johnstown and the nation have ever faced."

The veterans and their families were evicted from their improvised homes on the mud flats of Anacostia, Carter declared, without having been given an opportunity to gather up their food and personal belongings. The problem of taking care of these people Carter declared, is a national one. He is bitter in denunciation of the government for what he termed "the most disgraceful act in history."

The bonus refugees, billited in Ideal Park, a private tract on the outskirts of Johnstown, were saved from the pangs of hunger last night by the arrival of a truckload of food from Detroit. Forty men, accompanying the truck were taking the provisions to Washington when they heard of the disorders yesterday and plans for remobilization here. They arrived shortly after dusk last night and turned over their provisions to the commissary here.

KHAKI SHIRT ARMY

It is not planned to continue the camp here indefinitely, according to Mayor McCloskey and Capt. Carter. It is hoped soon they will continue to their homes or back to the capital to further the activities of the Khaki Shirt movement and assist in the recruiting of 30,000,000 men and women, whether they are veterans or not. Capt. Carter explained:

"Our only restriction for membership in this new Khaki Shirt Army is citizenship. Every man and woman who sympathizes with the veterans' cause is entitled to join."

Mayor McCloskey said:

"Yes, and when we get organized, we will march back to Washington and defy Mr. Mellon's President and all of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps he can muster around him to keep us out."

Fire, Gas Rout Last Veterans at Capital

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(AP.)—Bonus seekers by the score carried on a strange exodus from Washington today, scattered by a never-relenting fire and tear gas attack that made their once well-organized camps things of the past.

The tattered groups, some marching, some hitch-hiking, some getting rides in vehicles offered by adjoining states, were ushered out of the capital with a statement by President Hoover deploring an attempt to coerce the government by mob rule and expressing gratification that the challenge had been met "swiftly and firmly."

To see that the veterans really did stay out, three companies of steel-helmeted infantry camped on the scarred site of the bonus demanders' once most active center—acres of low ground in Anacostia, a suburb.

36 REDS ARRESTED

Then the cavalrymen, who started the clean-up after one veteran was killed and an officer shot in a clash between squatters and police, went home to Fort Myer, Va. Most doughboys occupied a quartermaster depot a few blocks from the White House, but three companies stayed at Anacostia.

In the cleanup, 36 radicals charged by many with having incited the rioting were arrested by police. Questioned by immigration officials, all but 17 were released last night, but spasmodic raids brought in others who awaited consideration today.

The Justice Department went ahead with its own inquiry into the violence that made President Hoover summon the might of the Army. At the chief executive's request, the now-sitting grand jury got ready for its study, charged by Justice Oscar R. Luhring to bring "to justice those responsible for this violence and those inciting it as well as those who took part in acts of violence."

HOOVER STATEMENT

President Hoover said:

"After months of patient indulgence the government met overt lawlessness as it always must be met if the cherished processes of self-government are to be preserved. We cannot tolerate the abuse of constitutional rights by those who would destroy all government, no matter who they may be. Government can not be coerced by mob rule."

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Stink of ashes in the air. Grit of cinders underfoot. Stink and grit of something more bitter than ashes in the heart,. The vet and I sat on the edge of the slope, looking down over the trampled, empty field of Anacostia.

Nine weeks it had been going on—that pitiful, terrible show. Twenty-five thousand ragged, hungry men camped like starving curs on that muddy flat . . . With the big dome of the Capitol rising beyond the river and the big shots of the Capitol riding by, easy and smug, in their limousines. "Nothing doing" under that big dome for those men camped by the river. "Nothing doing" with the big shots—

Kept the Dome There

Yet those starving men had kept that big dome in its place . . . Had put those big shots in theirs.

But, now, today, the "starving curs" are gone. Leaving yawning acres, sour with the ashes of defeat.

"Well, they got you, buddy, didn't they?" said I.

The vet didn't answer at once. He was a big, rangey fellow from Texas. His bones stuck out like the ribs on a "long horn" steer—his flesh hung to his bones in flaps.

For two years that man has been hungry. So have his wife and five kids. For the last 10 days he has been living on gruel. He fought that battle Thursday on gruel. His flesh is dirty, bloated, blue-pitted with malnutrition sores . . . He tried to cure those sores for a while. Now, he doesn't care.

They Kidded Themselves

He sprawled there on the bank, a pile of starving bones with scars across his bloated belly and medals hanging from his ragged shirt.

After a while he spoke. He didn't yell. He didn't lift his voice once from its flat, dead level. His words were like broken, shuffling feet going on and on and on—

"Yeah, they got us," he said.

"We knew they would. We didn't have a chance. We knew that even when we started. But we thought we might's well take a chance. We didn't have anything to lose. Our homes was gone. Our jobs was gone. Our towns was busted. Our folks were—

"So we thought we might's well try. But we didn't kid ourselves.

"Naw—I take that back. I reckon we did kid ourselves."

The voice stopped. For a long time he sat silent—his whole body sagging from the big, gaunt shoulders. I have seen range cattle, dying in drought, sprawl like that. Only his eyes seemed awake. His eyes looked straight ahead. They looked at the Capitol dome. They seemed to leave his empty, battered body and crawl, noiselessly, across that trampled field, toward that dome.

"Saps" to Believe Promises

"Yea—" he said at last, "I guess we did kid ourselves. We kidded ourselves about—that. We know now we were a lotta dopes. But we couldn't believe—that—they would go back on us.

"Maybe you don't understand. People who weren't in the war can't understand. But we kept thinking about the things we did, back in 1917 . . . and what they promised us.

"How they said we was heroes and the nation would never forget. Of course, we weren't saps enough to believe all of it. We got wise to the fact that most of it was hooey when we came home. And we got pretty sore—

"But somehow, we went right on kidding ourselves that they musta meant some of it. And a year ago, when things began to get so bad, we thought our chance had come to do something. Maybe they could forget us, in all that excitement after the war. But they wouldn't—we was sure they wouldn't—when they saw the break we was getting and remembered what we had done for them all.

Kept Their Faith in Hoover

"Specially Hoover. We'd a sworn Hoover wouldn't two-time us. He knew what it was all about. He'd been over there with us. He'd managed all those millions of dollars for relief. And it was the publicity he got outa that, that put him where he is . . . We was sure Hoover would give us a hand.

"And Pat Hurley. We banked on him too—particularly us Texans. Some folks warned us. They said he wasn't nothing but a pretty boy in white pants . . . Hoover's yes boy. But we didn't believe it. He'd been poor too. He looked like a regular egg. And he was—in a way o' speaking, our boss. We counted on him too.

"Well . . . now you know the answer."

Heroes vs. Railroads

The voice went on—

"They say we shouldn'ta come. They say we hadn't no right to lobby. They say we shoulda gone when the bill was vetoed . . . well, under ordinary circumstances, maybe they would be right. But things ain't ordinary.

"Haven't we as much right to come as the railroads have a right to come . . . as the banks have a right to come?

"Ain't a country's soldiers as much an institution as a country's freight cars?

"If rich fellows have a right to lobby in hotels haven't we a right to lobby down here in the mud? You don't hear of anybody driving them out with fixed bayonets, do you?"

"And if they couldn't give us money, couldn't they at least have given us a hand? Couldn't Hoover have come out and said a word to us . . . considering everything? Couldn't he at least have seen some of the boys? But he hasn't. He's hid in the White House, ever since we came. He wouldn't even let us parade past it. Everyone else can parade past it—but the ex-soldiers can't.

What Hurley Said

"And Hurley . . . you hear what he said about the unemployed? 'Let them shift for themselves'—that's what Hurley said. Well—"

He rose slowly—dragging his big, gaunt bones off the ground—stood swaying. His hand went fumbling to his shirt—came away with medal. I don't know the name of the medal. It was one of those things that are supposed to rank even presidential togs. The big Texan stood fumbling it—absently.

"Well, we're going to do what Hurley said. We're going to shift for ourselves. We're not going home for we haven't any home to go to—most of us. But we're on our way. And we'll spread the news—

"We'll tell the rest of the country what this administration thinks of the men who fought for the United States. And the men who worked for it."

His hand shot up—the medal in it. He heaved that medal into the mud.

"To hell with that," he said.

100,000 TO SEE OLYMPICS OPEN

Medical College, headed 150 Olympic "rooters" for the strong Japanest team in the Olympic games.

The Japanese are campaigning for the Olympiad in 1940 in celebration of the twenty-six hundredth anniversary of the founding of the Japanese empire.

Col. Eduardo Hernandez Chazaro was here personally to represent President Ortiz Rubio, of Mexico.

Mars was forgotten in Olympic village. Athletes from the storm-swept shores of the Baltic smiled in friendly rivalry at their carefree and singing competitors from sunny Italy.

France's fiery athletes demanded action. The Japanese and the Germans, the mighty-muscled sons of South Africa, the usually calm men of Great Britain and Canada, and the large United States contingent, could not restrain a bursting excitement, an eagerness to "go."

Young womanhood of the world, represented by 200 athletes, also was ready to take its place in the ranks of competing nations.

After the stirring ceremonies this afternoon the weight lifters were to present the first competitive program tonight, and for another thrill-packed 15 days and nights the big show will continue.

CITY PROPERTY VALUATIONS TOP COUNTY'S

$44,000,000 Variance On Same Buildings Shown by Audit

In two city wards, the First and Second, county tax assessors set a valuation of $44,000,000 less than did the city assessors for the same properties, according to a report filed by M. C. Conick, chief auditor for Main & Co., who for seven months has been checking the fiscal affairs of Allegheny County.

The report lists 50 properties in the downtown section and all but seven of these have higher valuations on the city's books than on the county's. Kaufmann's department store, the Koppers Building and the Gulf Refining Building are assessed by the City of Pittsburgh more than $1,000,000 in excess of the valuation placed on them by the county.

The three, according to Conick's report, were assessed by the city at $16,544,140. The County Assessors placed their valuation at $13,314,500, a difference of $3,229,640 or 24.26 per cent.

11 PER CENT VARIANCE

The total city assessment for the 50 properties, the report shows, is $12,405,420, about 11 per cent over the county figures.

Mechanical appliances to keep office records and assist clerical work, and the possibility of combining the efforts of city and county assessors under the supervision of a joint board, are suggested in the report as a remedy for the variance in assessments, and for economical operation of this function of government.

Four examples of publicly-owned tax exempt property being used for private enterprises are cited in the report. The county receives no revenue from these properties.

LEGALITY QUESTIONED

The suggestion is made that the county solicitor furnish an opinion as to the legality of taxing these properties.

The examples are: Two properties in the Second Ward, owned by the city, one used for storage bins by the J. K. Davidson Company, at Duquesne way and Eleventh street, and the other by the Youghiogheny Coal Company, at Eighth and Duquesne way. Parking lot in Grant street adjoining Koppers Building, owned by the Board of Education; Exposition buildings, land at Thirty-ninth and Fortieth streets, north of Butler street, owned by the United States government and leased to private interests.

It cost the county $686,178 in salaries to make the 1931 assessment, according to the report. For each $100 collected, the county spent 2.4 cents in salaries. The city's cost for the same work is less than 1 cent for each $100 assessed.

DEED COSTS VARY

In the deed registry department of the county the salaries approximate five times the sum paid for the city, the report says, although the assessed valuation in the county was less than twice that of the city. The total assessed valuation of real and personal property in the county is $2,306,271,240, the report says, and the city's total assessed valuation is $1,208,266,120.

In another report filed yesterday Conick points out:

"Careless and inaccurate records of road maintenance preclude even an approximation of the loss sustained by the county for expenditures covering labor and materials properly refundable by municipalities benefited thereby."

Time was charged to roads known under several names and the roads could not be identified by county employes, the report says.

Recent revision of the accounting system and preparation of a new list of roads which either by law or agreement must be maintained wholly or partially by municipalities, will serve to correct conditions, according to the report, the seventh filed in connection with the part of the audit covering joint venture agreements with municipalities in the county.

OHIO VETERANS GO TO CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, Pa., July 30.—Forty-five war veterans under the leadership of C. B. Collins, Cleveland, arrived in Washingtgon last night in trucks and automobiles en route to Washington. Collins said:

"We are going to Washington to demand our bonus despite the fact they chased the other army out of the city. We have as much right to help as the capitalists and large corporations."

The little army spent the night in the park here. They are from Cleveland, Canton, Akron and East Liverpool.

30 Injured Greeting American Comedians

GLASGOW, July 30.—(INS.)—Nine women and children were taken to hospitals with serious injuries today when a mob of 8,000 enthusiastic fans stampeded at a railway station in welcoming Stanley Laurel and Oliver Hardy, comedy team of the American screen.

Thirty were injured in all. Women and children were trampled and the crowd surged to catch a glimpse of the two actors.

RACKET WAR CLUES TRACED IN MURDER OF 3 VOLPES

VOLPE IN PRISON ASKS RELEASE FOR FUNERAL

Liquor Law Convict Shows No Fear of Being 'Bumped Off'

Louis Volpe, serving a term in Allegheny County Jail for a liquor law violation, will apply to Federal Court for permission to attend the funeral of his three brothers.

He indicated he did not fear being "bumped off." Attorney Edward G. Coll today said he would apply for the release of Louis as soon as the time for the funeral was announced.

Volpe's wife and two children were in the jail yesterday when the shooting occurred, Mrs. Volpe talking to her husband and the children in the waiting room.

As word was flashed to the jail, Warden John McNeil called Mrs. Volpe from the visitors' cage and told her of the shooting of Johnny, withholding the fate of the others. She decided she did not want to break the news to Louis.

After the visit of his wife, Volpe went to the library and was there when the Sun-Telegraph arrived. Another prisoner immediately told Volpe of the tragedy. Louis blanched slightly, but otherwise did not show emotion. Then he went to his cell. Later in the evening he consulted with Warden McNeil about his release for the funeral. He is due to be released finally on November 9.

CRIPPLE SHAKEN BY GANG SHOT

The man whose crutch stopped one of the bullets fired at John Volpe was back at work today in the Assessors' office, City-County Building, but considerably shaken by his experience.

Paul Pischke, city draughtsman, has been eating at a Wylie avenue restaurant for more than 20 years and was on his way there yesterday when a burst of gunfire snuffed out the lives of the three Volpe brothers.

Pischke said:

"It was terrible. I did not see any of the men who did the shooting. I did see the man that was shot go down on his knees and then fall forward by the curbstone. All I wanted was to get out of there."

Pischke lost a leg while working in a steel yard in Thirty-eighth street a number of years ago.

He turned on his crutches to get in a doorway for protection.

As he did so, a bullet glanced from the sidewalk and lodged in his left crutch. The impact jarred the crutch, but he held on to it, he said. It left a deep dent in the crutch. The homicide squad has the bullet.

Auto Crash Victim Dies in Hospital

A collision of automobiles at Gardner and Lowrie streets, Troy Hill, resulted in the death of Rudolph Geyer, 63, of 2045 Pitview street, in Allegheny General Hospital today. Geyer was a passenger in an automobile driven by his son, Eugene, which collided with one driven by Charles F. Suess, of 1800 Lowrie street.

Tetanus, which developed from a cut on the right foot suffered July 19 when he stepped on a piece of glass in a field near his home, caused the death last night in South Side Hospital of Joseph Kaczmarek, 8, of 2502 Josephine street, according to the coroner's report.

Volpe Boasted of Skill In Politics, Business

John Volpe liked to boast of his shrewd deals in business and politics. Only a few days ago he recounted one of his political victories which preceded the recent political downfall of his clan in Wilmerding. His explanation of this deal was:

"The man the Republican organization picked as candidate for an important office did not suit me. He was too closely aligned with the Westinghouse forces. I looked about for my own candidate. Two days before the primaries, I hadn't found anybody. I was driving in Pitcairn and saw a man I knew standing on the street talking to another man. I drove around the block, stopped and was introduced to the stranger. That night I called the stranger on the telephone. Told him I wanted to see him. He came to my house. I asked him how he would like to be my candidate. He was undecided, would have to consult with his wife. When he finally decided, I went to Uncle Joe (the late County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong) and told him.

" 'He's not a party man, John, we can't support him,' Uncle Joe said.

" 'You don't have to,' I replied, 'I'll elect him myself.' "

And Volpe did. In less than two days, he had his votes organized and elected his candidate.

For years the Volpes had been trying to secure valuable property near their Wilmerding store. The property was owned by a Wilmerding woman. Acting on the advice of Westinghouse, John said, she would not sell him the property. John laughingly told how he outwitted her by giving the money to a third person, who purchased the poperty from the woman, kept it for several months and transferred it to the Volpes. They now have a large garage and gas-filling station on the property.

FORD, 69 TODAY, VIEWS FARMS

DETROIT, July 30.—(AP.)—Henry Ford, now a farmer as well as an automobile manufacturer, passes his sixty-ninth milestone today. He hoped to spend most of the day inspecting the 15,000 acres and innumerable gardens which are contributions to his "back to the land" movement.

There will be interruptions, however.

He has promised an interview with newspapermen, an innovation to the birthday routine, and then he will read the many messages of felicitations which are pouring in. A sad omission will be the absence of the usual greeting from the late Thomas A. Edison, one of the three "old cronies" of whom Ford and Harvey S. Firestone are left.

Most of the Ford farms are in Southeastern Michigan and he makes the rounds of them several times a week. Only a few days ago, he rolled up his sleeves and made emergency repairs on a threshing machine which had broken down.

Will of 39 Words Leaves Wife Estate

Louis Polis, 1615 Monongahela avenue, Swissvale, by his will of 39 words, written on scratch paper, left an estate of $17,500 to his widow Teresina Polis. The document names Mrs. Polis executor.

Elizabeth Houlette, Nineteenth Ward, leaves an estate of $9,000 to her niece Harriet H. Franks, 206 Jefferson street, Connellsville, who is the executor. The estate consists of South Hills property.

CAPONE FRIEND OF BROTHERS SLAIN HERE

Sent Flowers to Bier Of Chester Volpe, Wreck Victim

Pittsburgh and Allegheny County politicians will be among those who turn out to pay tribute to the fallen czars of Western Pennsylvania's bootleg racket when the Volpes are buried Tuesday.

The entire homicide squad will mix in the funeral crowd in an effort to "make" faces, or detect possible strangers who might be connected with the Volpe killings.

Johnny Volpe is said by his friends to have spent $75,000 in relief for the poor of the Wilmerding district before the fall of his clan from political power. Coal, food, rent were bartered for votes which resulted, finally, in electing Jim to the Wilmerding Borough Council.

Homicide detectives and a dozen police rushed to Fullerton street and Claret way yesterday when a man was reported to be flourishing a pistol in an automobile. Police arrested Loy Dixon, Negro, of Forbes street, who is alleged to have drawn the gun, but they failed to connect him with the Volpe killing. Four others were arrested with Dixon.

Friendship between the Volpes and Al Capone, who today cools his heels in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., was shown in material form last winter when Capone sent a $300 floral piece to the funeral of Chester Volpe, killed in an automobile wreck. Capone has been rumored guest of the Volpes on several occasions.

Militant gangdom in Pittsburgh received scant encouragement in its search for romance as it scanned the Volpes' batting average. Of nine brothers, five remain alive, today.

The Volpe clan's real leaders are all dead. All under 40. Johnny was the acknowledged leader: Jim, the brains, and Arthur and Chester, able lieutenants, have departed from their turbulent sphere of activities. Chester was the one killed in the auto crash last winter.

The high price of gang activities is indicated by the Volpe's automobile budget. Automobiles and trucks number some 20 in the Volpe garage.

Politicians never refused to grant to the Volpes their request for initialed automobile license plates. Year after year, Johnny sported licenses with his initials. His number this year was J V-8. The straight J V plate is held by John Vickerman, director of the Bureau of Elections.

The Volpes' fall from political power in Wilmerding and the massacre of three of their leaders, yesterday, may quiet the seas of Wilmerding politics for the first time in years. Riots, clubbings, shootings, violence have marked elections in the Turtle Creek Valley since the Volpes first rose into prominence.

Some friend of the Volpes will do without the police courtesy card found in Johnny's pocket when he died. John had a card blank except for the signatures of the officials of a police fraternal organization.

The rise of the Volpe gang started in 1919, when they started in the grape and produce business. Violence and cunning shoved competitors out of the way. Wine making was a natural development, and their career was started.

FUNERAL FOR 3 VOLPES TO BE ELABORATE

Impressive, Expensive Display Arranged For Tuesday

Johnny Volpe may have coughed his last in a Wylie avenue gutter but he and his two brothers will be given a funeral fit for kings—kings of the underworld.

While their bodies lay partly covered with sheets, to hide the effects of the bullet wounds, in a Wilmerding funeral parlor today, plans were under way to bury them next Tuesday with an impressive, expensive display of grief.

And it seems they deserve an expensive funeral, for when their brother, young Chester, was killed in an auto accident in downtown Pittsburgh last New Year's eve morning, they laid him away with a procession of 250 automobiles and hundreds of floral offerings.

MANY VIEW BODIES

The long, unbroken line of curious, who viewed the bodies last night as they lay on exhibition, proved that although the Volpes may have been racketeers of the booze and numbers racket they were not without friends. For hours some waited to view the bullet-torn corpses and when the doors finally were opened they moved past at the rate of 50 persons a minute.

Some wept, others stopped to kiss the cold faces, others knelt in prayer.

In the Volpe apartments nearby, the widows gathered with their children. There, too, were the remaining Volpe brothers, upon whom might fall the task of avenging the assassinations.

WIFE HYSTERICAL

Only Amelia, mother of Johnny Volpe's five children, gave way to hysterical curses between her sobs. Finally she was led off to bed.

Short, plump Angela, wife of Jim Volpe, Elizabeth, slim, pretty wife of Arthur, concealed their sorrow.

Of the brothers, Joseph, just a few days ago released from jail on bail, and Guy Volpe shut tight their lips to all queries and hid their grief beneath the hard-set lines of their faces.

How Louis Volpe felt only Louis knew, for he was a prisoner in the county jail, locked up on a liquor charge some days ago. Perhaps he contrasted the wreck of the Volpe rackets to the domineering rule the brothers held a year ago.

VOLPE BARBER CITES BIG TIPS

Johnny Volpe, racketeer Beau Brummel who died in a gutter, today was to have received his $2.25 barbering.

Saturday is the day when Johnny used to get a hair cut, shave, shoe shine and manicure. Volpe had stopped about noon each day at the shop of Frank Manna, at 527 Fifth avenue. Manna said of the dapper gang leader:

Volpe was always a clean-cut man. Not one day has passed during the last two years that he has not sat in my chair. He came in every day for a shave and shoe shine. On Saturdays he added a hair cut and manicure. Johnny was always liberal with his tips."

When Johnny was finished and walked out of the shop on Saturdays he had most always paid an extra $1.50 in tips. Other days it amounted to about 75 cents.

While in the barber chair shortly after noon yesterday, Manna said he noticed that Volpe was peculiarly quiet. He said:

"He was quieter yesterday than I have ever seen him."

Woman May Be Quizzed Again on Murder Car

JANE POWELL, 2 MRS. MARY POWELL MAC POWELL, 4

Mrs. Powell, crippled for 22 years, with her two children at her home, 2040 Forbes street, from the windows of which she saw the automobile abandoned by the three gunmen who shot the three Volpe brothers to death yesterday. The car was parked in Seneca street. Mrs. Powell informed her husband, who found revolvers and then notified police. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Mother and Fireman First to Notice Machine

Detectives were expected today to again question Mrs. Mary Powell, of Forbes and Seneca streets, who was among the first to sight the car in which the Volpe murderers escaped yesterday. Mrs. Powell saw the auto parked across Seneca street from her home.

Crippled since the age of 2 from infantile paralysis, Mrs. Powell had wheeled herself to her window, she says, to watch her two children, Jane, 2, and Mac, 4, playing in the street. There she sighted the murder car, parked suspiciously across the street.

Almost simultaneously, E. J. Harper, a fireman at No. 34 Engine House, reported the machine to the police. He had noticed cartridges and a loaded revolver, had smelled powder smoke in passing. He said:

"When I stuck my head into the machine, it smelled like an arsenal. I knew something had happened."

When police arrived, they found but two pistols in the automobile. They soon located the third, wrapped in a towel in a rubbish barrel in the rear of Mrs. Powell's home. It had been thrown there, police say, by James Casey, of 2115 Fifth avenue.

Casey and James Barett, of 10 Senaca street, police say, had each, out of curiosity, removed one pistol from the car. The one Barett picked up was later found in the same rubbish barrel.

Police say Barett and Casey became frightened and excited when they realized the importance of the case in which the revolvers were involved and disposed of them in an effort to avoid being questioned in the case.

ACCUSE SUITOR OF EXTORTION

BEAVER, Pa., July 30.—Claude B. Mauk, 38, alleged suitor of Miss Julia Wagoner, 76, of Beaver Falls, was held for court on charges of blackmail by Justice of the Peace Marvin Wallover.

County Detective Robert Branyan charges Mauk wrote threatening letters to Miss Wagoner and then took letters, containing some $400, to mail to alleged senders and converted the money to his own use. Mauk produced a certificate showing he was married to Miss Wagoner April 2.

BOOZE CONTROL FIGHT BLAMED FOR KILLINGS

before he collapsed into a Wylie avenue gutter to die.

In Wilmerding today crowds again collected outside the Jones funeral parlors in Airbrake avenue to view the torn bodies of the three fallen booze bosses. Last night so great was the pressure of the crowd, an iron gate outside the parlors collapsed. And while an unbroken line of curious stepped past the bodies the wives and families of the victims huddled in their apartment, their grief hidden beneath sullen and revengeful feelings.

DETECTIVES BAFFLED

The Homicide Squad was on 24-hour duty in efforts to locate the killers, but they appeared thwarted by the ways of gangsters. The Pennsylvania license plates on the alleged death car, for instance, were issued in the name of one Sam Pignapa at 443 Peebles street, Wilkinsburg, but the detectives learned that Pignapa—if such a person exists—had never lived there.

What's more, the licenses were issued for other than a dark blue Ford sedan which is believed to have sped the assassins from the scene. Two hours later it was found abandoned in Soho at Forbes and Seneca streets, two revolvers in the car, two others in a nearby ash can, where they had been tossed by youths who had found them in the machine.

Examining the effects of the brothers, detectives found that John yesterday morning drew $2,600 from his bank. At the time he was slain, however, he apparently had less than $20 in his pockets. Detectives today were endeavoring to learn how he disposed of the large sum, thinking he must have transacted hurried business which might have been related to the murders.

CONEY ISLAND RACKET

They also learned that John Volpe, with a cousin, had a racket concession at Coney Island, New York summer playground, and a booze concession in Brooklyn, N. Y. John flew to inspect his holdings there regularly each week. He had planned to leave for New York today, they found.

Also among John's possessions when he died was a memorandum book, itemizing his dealings with liquor venders. They showed the brand, amount, name of purchaser, price and credit standing in each instance.

Approximately 50 per cent of the dealings showed that money was still owing to him. Volpe is known to have been many thousands of dollars "in the red" on his dealings.

It was learned that the Volpes recently had eluded payment of large losses incurred by them in the "numbers" racket by "passing the buck" to their partners. Having formed a consolidation of the largest "numbers" operators in the city, they were suspected of having cheated their partners in several instances. At the time of yesterday's slaughter, a break-up of the organization was imminent.

LIQUOR DEBTS

The brothers are also thought to have defaulted on payments for liquor to Detroit and New York gangs. The coffee shop, scene of the killings, although listed in the name of John Bazzano, Sam's brother, was referred to by John as "my place." From it he and his brothers directed their many racketeering enterprises. In it, yesterday, the bullet wounds wiped out three of them.

Remaining of the Volpe brothers today are Joseph, under indictment for assault and battery; Louis, serving a term in jail for liquor violations; Guy, Millay and Robert, a boy. The underworld does not regard the survivors as capable of continuing the gang's existence, successfully.

MORE SLAYINGS SEEN

Meanwhile, those claiming to be "in the know" freely predicted that at least two more racketeers of the Volpe mob will be "put on the spot" within a few days. They say that the job is to be completed without mercy.

Reprisals were expected by many. The code of the underworld—a code of retaliations—must be followed, they say. A long, relentless liquor war may be in prospect for Pittsburgh.

If Chief George W. Murren's force of county detectives were taking part in the investigation of the racketeers whose activities were spread over the county, they were secretive about it. And District Attorney Andrew T. Park had only this to say:

"I have no statement to make. I'm too busy."

3 WOMEN OF FAMILY TO CARRY ON PRIDGEON'S WORK

BIBLE INSTITUTE WOMEN 'CARRY ON'

MRS. C. H. PRIDGEON — MRS. REBECCA PRIDGEON — MISS ELLA PRIDGEON

The wife, the mother and the sister of the late Rev. C. H. Pridgeon, pastor of the Wylie Avenue Church, who will continue his life-long work. Mr. Pridgeon, who died last week, founded the Bible Institute in the Hill district where men and women are trained as missionaries, and an orphanage at Gibsonia which shelters boys and girls. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

MOTHER, WIFE, SISTER TO RUN INSTITUTE

Three women, a wife, mother and sister, will carry on the work of the late Rev. C. H. Pridgeon, 69, pastor of the Wylie Avenue Church, who died July 21.

For 30 years, the Rev. Pridgeon, graduate of Princeton and universities in Scotland and Germany, has conducted services in the Hill district and trained men and women as missionaries, ministers and religious workers.

FOUNDED ORPHANAGE

In addition to his Bible Institute on Wylie avenue, the Rev. Pridgeon founded an orphanage at Gibsonia, near Wexford consisting of 500 acres of farmland. Between 30 and 40 boys and an equal number of girls are given temporary homes there. Both institutions are non-sectarian and exist wholly from voluntary contributions.

In the past 10 years more than 60 missionaries have been sent out from the school to foreign lands, Mrs. Pridgeon said.

No tuition is charged at the Bible institute, she said. High school educations are supplemented with Bible studies, Hebrew, Greek, French, Chinese, Hindustani, homiletics, English rhetoric and public speaking.

INSTITUTE BRANCHES

Outstations of the Pittsburgh Bible Institute are located at Salem, Va.; Philadelphia, Germania and Austin, Pa.; Farmingdale, L. I., and Lindenhurst, N. Y.; Akron, O., and Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada, with city missions on the North Side, at Dormont and Negley Run, Mrs. Pridgeon said.

Work will be carried on by Mrs. C. H. Pridgeon, wife of the deceased clergyman; Miss Ella Pridgeon, his sister, and Mrs. Rebecca Pridgeon, his aged mother, who supervises the work at the orphanage.

COUNTY JOINING RATE FIGHT

Allegheny County will join Gov. Pinchot's fight against unfair rates for electricity. The commissioners have empowered Ray Sprigle, director of property and supplies, to investigate the county's electric bills.

A letter received yesterday from Director of Highways F. J Chester said the county's bill for lighting its bridges has jumped from $16,000 in 1924 to $69,154 this year, and that in 1932, with the new West End bridge opened, it will be approximately $75,000.

How does WWSW get the Pirates' out of town games?—Bert D., Jeannette, Pa.

Western Union men specially trained in reporting all kinds of sports events tap out the details of the game on Morse instruments. A direct wire from the press box at the field carries the eye-witness stories to the studio, where they are decoded by Joe Sartory and written out and handed to Ed Sprague, the man at the "mike."

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

In the fall you just can't keep off two topics, the debutante affairs and the horse shows, in June, lovely brides, and in the summer, travel news. But then what does it matter as long as we all are interested, actually or vicariously, in trips hither and yon at this time of year.

Have you heard that Virginia Drake, daughter of the J. Frank Drakes, who is summering with her family at their Hyannisport place, will spend next week with Parthenia Ross, of New York, at Rumson, N. Y.

Anita Tim and her mother, Mrs. John Frederick Tim, are home from New York and Bayhead, N. J. Anita's marriage to Edward Paul Game, son of Ernest C. Games, of Cohoes, N. Y., will be a late fall event.

Monday night the Roy H. McKnights, of the East End, will leave town to motor to Camp Keewaydin, Vt., where their daughter, Alice, is at the girls camp, and their son, Roy H. McKnight, Jr., is at the boys camp. Ever so many boys and girls of Pittsburgh are at Keewaydin this summer.

Return Home

Mrs. Chester M. Van Kleeck, Miss Margaret Adair, Mrs. Howell C. Cooper and Mrs. Daniel E. Nevin have returned to Sewickley after being in New York, where they stopped at the St. Regis.

The junior William Loftis Monroes are the guests of the W. Don Harrisons at Point au Baril, Ontario, Canada. Later they will be joined by Col. Paul Hunt.

The L. B. Guddys and their daughter, Margaret, of Sewickley, are vacationing at the Hotel Ojibway, Point au Baril.

Dr. Frank Edmundson will join Mrs. Edmundson and their children, Helen, Catherine and Walker, for the month of August at Shephardstown, Va. His family have been there since the first of July, where they are occupying the Dudley Pendleton house. They all plan to return to town after Labor Day.

* * *

Yesterday I told you a number of the patronesses for the rodeo this afternoon at the old Pittsburgh Hunt Club for the benefit of the "Seeing Eye," and now I can tell you of some additional names on the list. They are Mrs. J. Hanson Rose, Mrs. Frank LeMoyne, Mrs. Clarles Flaccus, Mrs. Edgar Reed, Mrs. Francis Burke Rodgers and Miss Elizabeth MacFarlane.

* * *

To Marry On Aug. 6

The news we have all been awaiting so long—the date of Jane Allderdice's marriage—is being announced today. Jane, the daughter of the Taylor Allderdices, of Wilkins avenue, will wed Willis McCook Reed, son of the W. Edgar Reeds, on Saturday, August 6, in the Allderdice home. Only the families will attend the ceremony.

Jane attended Miss Wright's School and Bryn Mawr, and her fiance is a graduate of Yale.

After the wedding, Mr. Reed and his bride will leave on a motor and fishing trip.

* * *

Race Set Aug. 27

Another bit of news, not as exciting as the wedding, of course, is that the Pittsburgh Hunt is having a steeplechase race on August 27 at the corner of the Fox Chapel and Kittaning Pike roads, at 3 o'clock.

In charge are G. H. Cherrington, G. G. Davison, G. B. Flaccus and George Kelly.

And now more travel news: Attractive Helen Leovy has gone to Hyannisport, Mass., to join the ever-growing Pittsburgh colony. Mrs. T. A. McGinley is returning to Sewickley this week after visiting Mrs. J. R. McGinley at her summer place at Manchester-by-the-Sea.

Others were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Reybourn, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Louther, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McMarten and Mr. and Mrs. B. Ernest and two sons.

White Sulphur Colony Anticipates Lee Week

Colonists at White Sulphur Springs are anticipating Robert E. Lee Week at the Greenbrier, with the Lee costume ball on Friday, August 26, as the outstanding event. The same coachman who 50 years ago drove the Greenbrier stage over the Buffalo trail will don his livery to meet the guests at the station.

Among those active in making plans is Mrs. George W. Crawford, of Pittsburgh and New York, who with Mrs. Henry Waters Taft and Miss Ashton Wilson, both of New York, will be three of the Lee Week hostesses.

Mrs. George M. Monro will arrive for the celebration. Seen playing on the links during the past week were Mrs. Crawford and Mrs. Frederick Wilms.

Picnic to Be Held Tuesday By Business Women Of Wilkinsburg

There is nothing quite so popular with everyone in the summer as a picnic. The Business and Professional Women's Club of Wilkinsburg is holding its annual picnic Tuesday afternoon and evening, beginning at 5 o'clock, in Frick Park. There will be games, too, afterwards, in charge of Mrs. Janet Snyder, Miss Helen Hamel and Mrs. Agnes Bauman. Dr. Mary E. Coffin, the president, is general chairman.

Hostesses for the affair include Mrs. Virginia Hitchon, Mrs. Beulah Russell, Miss Agatha Newton, Miss Hazel Rhodes, Miss Hannah Brown and Mrs. Rena Simpson. Mrs. Caroline Kinch will also aid.

B. P. W. Federation Party Entertained in Italy

American business women, abroad on the fifth annual Good Will Tour of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, were showered with official entertainment during their visit to Italy, according to a cable from Dr. Grace Hadley Beardsley, of Baltimore, leader of the party.

Among their hosts in Rome were Count D'Ancora, the vice governor, and American Ambassador John W. Garrett and Mrs. Garrett. In Genoa the mayor of the city tendered them an official reception at the City Hall.

Rome is the headquarters of the Italian Federation of Business and Professional Women, the largest federation in Europe, with a membership approximating 16,000, and entertainment in that city was under federation auspices. The clubhouse of the federation was thrown open for an afternoon reception at which Dr. Maria Castellani, head of the statistical bureau of the national insurance fund of Italy, president of the Italian Federation, and incidentally the first woman to head an Italian government bureau, received.

Mrs. Garrett also gave a tea for the group at the Rospigliosi palace, while on successive mornings the party received an official welcome from Count D'Ancora at the Capitol and from Mr. Garrett at the embassy.

Visits to galleries and museums in Venice, Milan and Florence were interspersed with luncheons, teas and similar functions given by the business and professional women's clubs in those cities, all of which have been organized since the fourth annual Good Will Tour visited Italy last summer.

Miss Dorothy A. Heneker, of Montreal and Geneva, executive director of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women, is serving as business manager of the group and has assisted in planning the entertainment program. Representatives of the National Federation from California, Florida, Idaho, Maine, Maryland, Missouri, Montana, Nebrasko, New Hampshire and Washington State are on the tour.

They Reminded Germany That It Needs Army

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

See what those Lausanne peace gabbles finally did?

They reminded Germany that it didn't have an army and a navy.

The boys can't defend themselves with butter paddles and egg beaters.

So they're going to organize in case something happens that they're thinking about. Not that it will. But you never can tell, as the farmer said when he went to town with his money in his shoe.

It has France worried because France is only one up on Germany now. Liable to dub the next hole. That makes England dubious also.

Puts England in the middle again like a brakeman coupling freight cars. No matter which way the train goes he has got to jump.

And America? Well, we've learned that when you try to separate two battling fishwives it's only the referee who gets scratched.

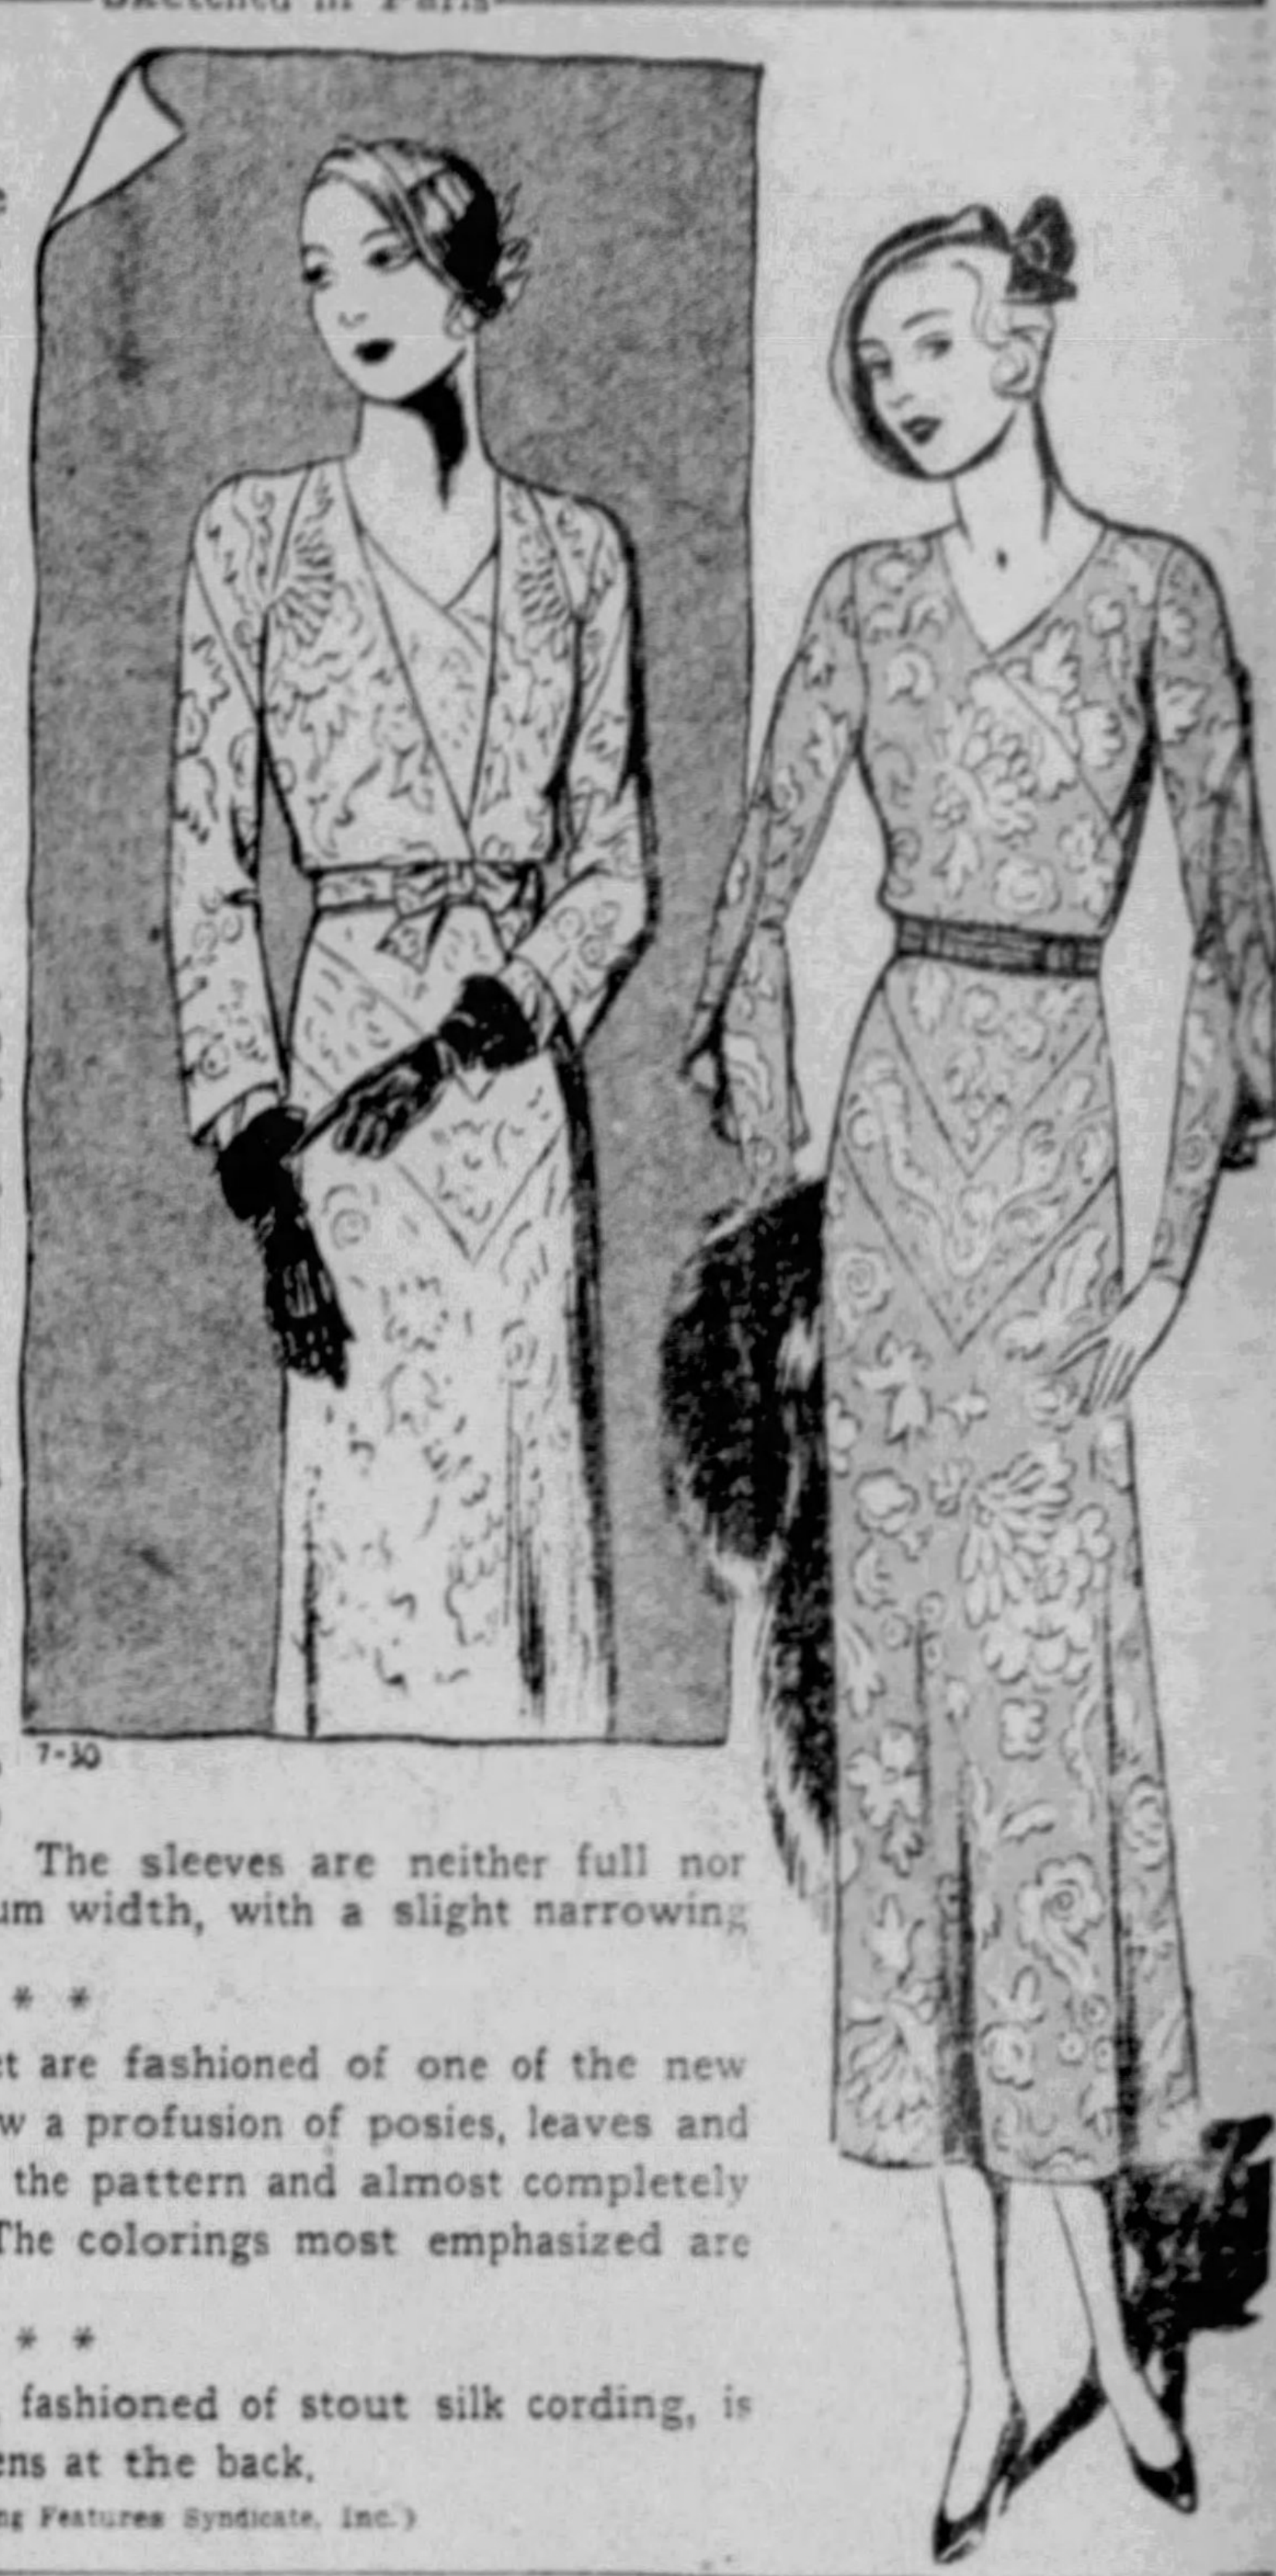
BUSY BRIDE FINDS TIME TO MAKE QUILT

MISS RUTH HARSH AND HER HALF-FINISHED QUILT . . . . . SHE'S BEING MARRIED TODAY

Even brides busy with trousseaus and honeymoon plans find time to participate in the quilt-making fad which has struck the Pittsburgh district. Miss Harsh, of Avalon, who today becomes the bride of John A. Lockard, of Emsworth, shown with the quilt which, when finished, will contain more than 9,250 patches. The pattern is known as the Martha Washington Flower Garden or the French Bouquet. Patches are inch wide. These are Sun-Telegraph pictures.

THE PRINTED COAT SWEEPS FASHION WORLD EVERYWHERE

—Sketched in Paris—



Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, July 30. — The printed coat continues to be this year's favorite fashion. It is worn in Paris, both day and evening, over plain-colored dresses and dresses of matching print. It is worn in the country and at beach resorts. It appears in bright, flagrant colors and in sober gray-and-black versions. It is seen full-length, three-quarter-length and bolero length. In sum, it is the 1932 coat.

* * *

WORTH'S little printed bolero that ties at the waist like a blouse was chosen for today's sketch, because it shows how effectively a little coat like this transforms a simple printed frock into a costume fairly formal, and thoroughly appropriate for the street, without adding undue warmth. Like most of Worth's new boleros, it is cut at a sharp inward-slant toward the waist, so that the back fits smoothly; it gives a line sufficiently dignified to be worn by an older woman, or one of large proportions, who ordinarily would avoid the sharp cutting line of a short jacket. The sleeves are neither full nor tight, but compromise at medium width, with a slight narrowing toward the shoulders.

* * *

BOTH DRESS and janket are fashioned of one of the new elaborate flower prints that show a profusion of posies, leaves and vines overlapping each other in the pattern and almost completely obliterating the background. The colorings most emphasized are navy blue and white.

* * *

THE BELT of the dress, fashioned of stout silk cording, is in blue, red and white and fastens at the back.

STEEL OUTPUT STEADIES AT LOW RATE

By R. E. V. LUTY

The steel trade's appraisal of its future has been growing more hopeful until now it may be said to be almost sanguine. The turn in sentiment occurred nearly three weeks ago when there was recovery in demand from the particularly low rate of the early days of July, now seen to have been only a temporary dip due largely to semi-annual inventory taking and the national holiday.

Steel demand as a whole has not been engaged of late in increasing, as ingot production in each of the last three weeks has been substantially the same, approximately 15 per cent, or a little more, of capacity. The rate fully equals that of the latter half of June, and thus there has been no decrease in a month and a half, after a decline of three years, continuous except for short interruptions.

The better appraisals of the steel trade's future rest chiefly upon three things: First, a more hopeful attitude expressed by many steel mill customers as to their business in future; second, a turn in fundamental conditions, economic and financial, promising an upturn in business generally; third, a deficiency of late in steel buying from the actual tonnage needed for upkeep and maintenance of facilities. Things have been running down, and that cannot be allowed to continue indefinitely.

'PRINCE OR PAUPER'

Steel is marked eventually for a sharper rise than industrial activity in general, on the accepted "prince or pauper" doctrine. The recent divergence of steel on the pauper side is easily measured. The Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production, manufacturing and mining is based on 1923-4-5 as 100 and was announced at 59 for last month. A similar index computed for steel ingot production puts last month at 26—less than one-half the general index. For 1929 the general index was 119 and the steel index 132, showing 13 points excess on the princely side.

Tin plate production this month has been about 10 per cent under June and next month is in line for a further seasonal decrease. Even Ford, although late with the new model, has already been decreasing production, while other automobile makers are doing less and less. These are the only decreases observed in steel demand, seasonal or otherwise.

SEPTEMBER RISE SEEN

Fabricated structural steel lettings in the last three months have run well above the average of the first four months of the year.

The stove and range industry is increasing its steel buying week by week. Farm implement makers have been doing almost nothing and it is uncertain when their regular manufacturing season will begin.

Very fair autumn buying in agricultural sections is expected.

The chief increase in steel demand is expected to come from the wide variety of small and medium sized users more than from the few large consuming industries. In view of clear and uniform precedent no more than a small improvement is expected for August, September being the month predicted for showing substantial gains.

Finished steel prices are making a little better showing by reason of withdrawal of some special concessions at the end of June.

The Pittsburgh district scrap market continued very dull this week but the tone has improved.

Exports of Cotton Cloth Show Gain

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(AP.)—A 13 per cent gain in exports of cotton cloth from the United States during the first half of this year as compared with the same period in 1931 was reported by the Commerce Department!

It said the increase was particularly significant because it was made in the face of competition from countries off the gold standard, increased tariffs and generally depleted purchasing power.

The department also said Italy continued to increase her purchases of United States cotton during May, importing 68,000 bales, compared with 53,000 for April and 41,000 in May, 1931.

Pit Asks Ruling On Marketing Act

CHICAGO, July 30.—(AP.)—Appealing from a federal decree suspending the world's largest grain market for 60 days, the Chicago Board of Trade has petitioned the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for a ruling on the constitutionality of the grain futures act.

A commission of three of President Hoover's cabinet members invoked this 1922 law to discipline the Board of Trade after it denied clearing house privileges to the Farmers' National Grain Corporation, co-operative sponsored by the Federal Farm Board.

Cotton Fertilizer Sales Cut Sharply

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Domestic cotton acreage on July 1 this year has been estimated at 37,290,000 acres. This figure is 9½ per cent below last year and 19.1 per cent less than 1930, and the lowest since 1922. According to the bureau of agriculture economics, sales of fertilizer tags indicate that there has apparently been about 40 per cent less fertilizer applied to cotton in the United States this year than last.

U. S. Gold Supplies Increase $7,503,900

NEW YORK, July 30.—The daily gold statement of the New York Federal Reserve Bank shows a net gain in gold stocks yesterday of $7,503,900 as a result of a net release of that amount of gold from stocks held under earmark for foreign account. There were no imports or exports.

WORLD TARIFF REDUCTION URGED

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 30.—The era of better feeling could be lengthened by a simultaneous effort in the principal countries to reduce tariff barriers.

A 10 per cent reduction all around, though leaving all in the same relative position, would, in my opinion, have an enormous psychological effect in serving notice on the business men of the world that politicians, after devoting the first 14 years after the World War to paying lip service to crazy economics, were at length in a mood to face economic realities.

Mr. Rukeyser

The liquidation of reparations at the Lausanne conference gave vitality to the present revival of hope in the principal markets of the world.

As far as the United States is concerned, it ought to think realistically about tariff matters. Adoption of the principle of reciprocity would give it an opportunity to display Yankee shrewdness, exacting a quid pro quo for concessions.

Higher prices for stocks and bonds tend to heighten quasi investment demand, for they assure skeptics that the old measuring rod may still be used. During the earlier liquidation, when prices no longer reflected values but simply the distress of sellers, people became confused, and lost faith in their standards of measurement.

At the June 1 levels numerous securities were selling at prices as ridiculous and as unwarranted as the inflated bull market prices which reached a peak early in September, 1929. Before the crash, unreasoning optimists were discounting an unbroken progression of periods of increasing profits. On the other hand, at the June lows, prices were reflecting the fear that conditions would become progressively worse, even though at that time many fundamental commodities were selling below the cost of production. At the recent lows, the prevailing mood was expressed in the current wisecrack to the effect that business was 20 per cent ahead—of what it would be in 1933.

The setting aside of the incubus of reparations at Lausanne, the stabilization of commodity prices at home, and the cessation of gold exports, are pivotal points in the conversion of the business public from the mood of excessive and unreasoning pessimism.

Speculators Puzzled By Steady Utpurn In Market

NEW YORK, July 30.—(INS.)—The market has entered the Chinese puzzle stage. Few know why it has gone so high. Everyone (and particularly those who have missed out and would like to get aboard) is waiting for a good reaction, and yet stocks continue to forge ahead. Tape action is still convincing, and so far there are few signs of any important setback.

A great many have been feeling for the top for days and this new crop of shorts has undoubtedly supplied fresh momentum for the rise.

The public at large has been showing widespread interest in the present market for the first time in more than a year.

The last time they were in was in the big moratorium splurge in June a year ago. For the present, they have been doing a lot of inquiring but little buying, waiting for a reaction, like so many others. Some brokers report calls from former clients they haven't heard from in a couple of years and more. But the bears are still die-hard about it all, and big wire houses have been selling on balance for days. Important interests who have been out of Standard of California for some time have been buying the stock. The company is earning about as much as Standard of New Jersey and looks out of line. The third quarter will be the big one for the California oil companies, since the crude price increase came late in June.

Youngstown Moves Against Oil 'Racket'

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 30.—Youngstown City Council has passed an ordinance prohibiting cutting and misbranding of petroleum products to become effective August 22.

This is the second action of its kind taken in Ohio against deceit in sale of oil and gasoline, the first being in Cincinnati a few weeks ago.

Similar measures are being advanced in nearly a dozen other cities in the state.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, July 30.—(AP.)—Settlements through the banks for the past week are considerably lower. The total this week at all leading cities in the United States of $3,545,587,000 shows a decrease of 40.5 per cent in comparison with that of the same period of 1931. The decrease in the total from the figures for last week amounts to about $650,000,000, while comparison of the two corresponding weeks of last year reveals a decline of $1,260,000,000.

Substantial decreases appear at Boston, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Buffalo and San Francisco, while some improvement is noted at Cincinnati, Minneapolis and a few of the southern cities.

VOLPE JEWELS MISSING

Reputed monarchs of the underworld, the Volpes—John, Jimmy and Arthur—died with little sign of "big money" about them.

Less than $20 was found on the three bodies, morgue attaches said, and in the safe of the Rome Coffee Shop, 704 Wylie avenue, where detectives expected to find the clan's bankroll, they found $10.

Even in place of the 7½-carat diamond usually associated with Johnny Volpe, he wore a bloodstone. This and other diamonds, friends assert, are in pawn, though their owner a few days ago insisted they were in his safety deposit box.

His car, purchased through a finance company, was not entirely paid for.

Depression and its effects among the thousands to whom the Volpes owed their political power in Wilmerding; political fixing and money owed him for booze, had stripped their ready cash, friends say.

6 MEN CLEARED OF LYNCHING

IRONTON, O., July 30.—(AP.)—Six white men accused of lynching Luke Murray, Atlanta (Ga.) Negro chauffeur, were acquitted of second-degree murder charges by a jury of white men in Common Pleas Court here yesterday.

The jury deliberated about eight hours, after asking additional instructions of the court on a manslaughter count.

The defendants, Taylor Napier, Theodore Johnson, Clyde Elkins and Milford, Garland and Lawrence Massie—were accused of forcibly removing Murray from the South Point (O.) jail and beating him to death. The state claimed a body taken from the Ohio River was that of Murray.

North Park Pool Project Taken Up

County Parks Director Paul B. Riis has been directed to report within 10 days on the type of a swimming pool that can be built in North Park for approximately $100,000. Commissioner C. M. Barr told his colleagues yesterday that the southern part of the county has been favored over the northern, and declared a pool should be built in North Park.

Woman Found Slain In Ky. Woodland

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., July 30.—(AP.)—The body of Mrs. Gus Kereiakes, 26, pretty wife of the proprietor of a hat cleaning establishment, was found in a woodland two miles from here yesterday.

A poison powder was scattered near the scene, and a crudely-written suicide note was found in her hand, which her relatives said was not in her handwriting. Police started a search for Remus Griffin, 29, Negro, formerly employed by Kereiakes.

Son and Son-in-Law Held for Beating Man

Arrested last night for beating John De Vangalo, 60, with a nine-inch screw-driver, his son, George De Vangalo, 21, and son-in-law, Mike Rossi, both of Tenth street, Pitcairn, were held in jail at Pitcairn to await hearing. The victim suffered injuries from blows on the head and face. The trio quarreled over family troubles, police said.

He was married about six years ago to May Allison, movie actress, who is at his bedside. They had planned to return to their home in New York in a week.

QUAKER OATS PRICE CUTS OFFSET

CHICAGO, July 30.—Price cuts made by Quaker Oats Company on its oatmeal and pancake flour lines leave undisturbed the company's profit margins on these products which remain at practically normal ratios. Stability of the industry's price structure is unaffected by this action.

Reductions in selling prices of these lines, of which the last is the third within a year, have been met with compensating reductions in operating and other costs as well as savings from lower costs of raw materials.

TONNAGE HOLDS UP

The three price cuts which have been made bring the selling prices of these products 20 per cent below peak levels and down to prewar quotations. The object of the reductions is to maintain Quaker brands of advertised cereals on a competitive basis with all other food lines as well as strictly cereal products.

Tonnage volume of business on advertised lines remains at a high level and comparable with the 1931 rate, which was only slightly less than in the preceding year.

OATS RANGE NARROW

One of the major factors contributing to the stability of Quaker's business and one that has made it so far immune to the depression is the relatively narrow price range of oats, the principal grain required by the company. As a result inventory depreciation is minimized and special write-off losses on this account avoided.

For the year ended December 31, 1931, Quaker Oats Company reported record net profit of $6,856,592, equal, after dividend requirements on the 6 per cent preferred stock, to $8.22 a share on 702,000 no-par shares of common stock. This compared with $6,003,860, or $7.01 a common share in 1930. The company does not issue interim statements.

PAY CUTS VOTED GLASS MEN

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 30.—(AP.)—The conference between representatives of the National Association of Manufacturers of Pressed and Blown Glassware and the American Flint Glassworkers Union today recommended a reduction in wages of 15 per cent in the iron and paste mould departments.

A reduction of 15 per cent in the table and bar departments also was recommended. The recommendations will be presented to the workers in the various departments for a referendum vote before they can put it into effect.

Today's recommendations followed three reductions last week: One for 12½ per cent in the machine pressed ware department, one for 17½ per cent in the hand pressed ware department, and one for 17½ per cent in the punch tumblers and stem ware departments. There are still four or five other departments to be considered.

PROFIT-TAKING AGAIN CUTS STOCK GAINS

NEW YORK, July 30.—(AP.)—The stock market ran into week-end profit-taking in the early trading today, and sagged in quieter trading.

Losses of about 1 to 2 points appeared in the first half hour in such issues as American Telephone, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Allied Chemical, United Fruit, American Woolen preferred and Beechnut, while issues off fractionally included U. S. Steel preferred, American Can, Westinghouse and others.

A number of brokers again advised their clients that a technical reaction was due, after the violent advance of the past two weeks, but they generally expected it to be merely a temporary corrective movement. On the whole, Wall street came through to the end of the week in the best frame of mind in months, although a number of pessimistic traders who failed to see an adequate basis for the rally in business developments were sorely perplexed and confused.

Yesterday's rumor that the railroads might receive loans to renovate equipment, which accompanied the brisk advance in rails and rail equipment issues, found support in President Hoover's statement that preliminary conversations had been held with railway chiefs regarding such an undertaking, as a means of expanding employment. The President's disclosure that a board of engineers would be formed to pass on loans for self-liquidating projects was viewed hopefully by the steel trade and related lines.

Foreign exchanges stiffened a little at the opening, with sterling quoted ⅛ higher at $3.50⅝.

MARKET PROBE TO PROCEED

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(INS.)—The Senate stock market investigation will be carried on by expert investigators during the summer, Senator Norbeck (Rep.), of South Dakota, chairman, announced, following a meeting of the sub-committee in charge.

The investigators, Norbeck said, will pay much attention to tax avoidance and evasion by big corporations. He said:

"There is a difference between tax avoidance and evasion. Tax evasion is where they beat the government and the money can be recovered, and tax avoidance is where they beat the government and get away with it.

"We have reports that it has been quite a common practice to set up companies in Canadian provinces where there is no income tax, pretend that the profits were made in Canada and thus evade the American tax.

"The tax recoveries from this investigation will pay its cost many times over. It may lead to a strengthening of the tax laws."

The summer inquiry will be in charge of James E. Stewart, of South Dakota. Norbeck said that hearings may be held during the summer, but probably will be postponed until fall.

Traders "Left Behind" on Upturn Now Hoping For Reaction

Most of Wall street would welcome a reaction, but the basis for such reasoning differs with the individual or group in question. The more conservative element would like to see something in the way of a corrective decline to keep the speculative situation healthy. But there is another group made up of disgruntled traders, who having missed the bandwagon a week or 10 days ago, have since been sitting by waiting for a reaction to provide an opportunity for participation. It would be difficult to find a more disgruntled crew than that portion of the speculative fraternity which has been left behind.

The National Lead Company, an important shipper, has decided that henceforth all the freight business which it controls shall go to the railroads. The company announced that its directors had adopted a resolution favoring rail transportation wherever possible for all shipments under the company's control as their contribution toward helping the railroads recover their financial health and purchasing power. The action was taken by the company "in recognition of the importance of the welfare of the railroad industry as a factor in any general economic recovery."

Federal Reserve open market operations virtually were brought to a halt in the week ending July 27, when only $5,000,000 in government securities were purchased. With one exception this was the smallest amount purchased since the new open market policy was adopted, in April. Total holdings of governments by the Reserve banks July 27 were $1,841,000,000, an increase of $956,000,000 since April 6 and of $1,163,000,000 in a year. Officials said there had been no change in policy, but that the banks would continue to operate in the open market as conditions from time to time justified. For the second successive week the use of government securities back of Federal Reserve notes declined. A total of $623,090,000 in governments was pledged with the Reserve agents as note collateral, a decline of $8,000,000 for the week.

Despite the fact that net profits of United Light and Power Co. still are trending downward the company has reduced its consolidated bank loans to around $3,600,000 from the $4,400,000 total shown June 1. "When the bank loans are paid up, unless earnings are completely shattered, I know of no present reason why preferred dividends should not be resumed," William Chamberlain, president, said. "It is not outside the range of possibility this may be done within a year. If a bond market should develop, we may do it sooner."

Buying of carrier equities appeared predicated on Washington discussions for the granting of loans to railroads to facilitate maintenance and repairs. In addition, leading systems are going seriously about the business of smoothing out competitive difficulties and otherwise meeting their mutual problems. Although there would be no tonic like a pickup in traffic to change the railroad picture, professional operators were probably satisfied with what news had come to hand.

"While recent hot weather in the northwest caused some damage to crops, the losses will be considerably less than had been forecast early this week," Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific Railway, said on his return to St. Paul from a trip to Montana. "Throughout the inland empire," Mr. Donnelly said, "there prevails a distinct note of optimism. My observations on the trip were that there is real basis for the statement that the economic conditions are brighter in the northwest today than in any region of the United States."

Westinghouse Air Brake Earns Seven Cents For Quarter

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE WESTINGHOUSE Air Brake Company is able to maintain its operations on a profitable basis in spite of unfavorable conditions affecting the railroads, which are the company's chief customers.

Net earnings for the three months ended June 30, after depreciation and taxes, were $222,933. This was equivalent to 7 cents a share on 3,172,110 shares of capital stock, as compared with $379,594, or 12 cents a share, the first quarter of the year and with $963,241, or 30 cents a share, the second quarter of 1931.

In the first half of the present year, Air Brake earned $602,527, or 19 cents a share, as compared with $1,953,770, or 61 cents a share, for the corresponding period of 1931.

Railroad Car Buying Small

THE COMPANY'S ability to keep itself on a profitable basis in the face of adverse circumstances is particularly impressive in view of the almost complete cessation of equipment buying by the railroads. In the first five months of 1932, Class I railroads of the United States placed only 1,671 freight cars in service, as compared with 6,448 for the same period last year. When it is realized that a total of 84,894 new cars were put in service in the full year of 1929, the extent of the slump in car buying becomes fully apparent.

Sales of the Union Switch and Signal Company, a subsidiary, have been particularly influential in supporting earnings during the period of dullness in railroad car buying. During 1930 and 1931 many lines completed large installations of interlocking signal equipment. These improvements were made because they frequently reduced the number of employes necessary to control the movement of trains. Recently, however, the financial condition of the carriers has made it impossible for them to continue work of this kind except in a few cases.

Subway Contracts Important Factor

DURING THE PAST year contracts to supply both signal and brake equipment for new subways in New York and Philadelphia have constituted a major source of business for Westinghouse Air Brake.

The company's investment holdings have been an important influence in holding up earnings. The reports do not indicate the amount of revenue from such sources, but it appears to be large. The last annual report showed stocks and bonds of other companies held at $8,515,714. This included the Westinghouse Air Brake interest in allied companies in foreign countries. Most of these companies have been busy as a result of a widespread movement to install air brakes in foreign railroads, many of which have not had this equipment in the past. In addition the company held $19,690,576 of United States government securities, while it has no funded debt or preferred stock outstanding.

Westinghouse Air Brake enjoys a strong current financial position, which could provide for the payment of unearned dividends for a considerable period. The decline in earnings, however, indicates that the future of the dividend is in doubt. Since directors probably would not be willing to continue to deplete cash resources unless prospects for a speedy recovery in business could be seen. The stock is on $1 annual basis.

NARROW RANGE IN LOCAL STOCKS

Prices maintained a steady to firm tone on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange in today's short session as the New York market recovered its strong tone after a little hesitancy in the early trading. Business on the local exchange was fairly well spread among the various issues. The fuels held the leadership of the market with prices ranging near the best levels of the current movement.

Western Public Service went above $5 a share for the first time on the recovery and Lone Star held firmly above the $6 level. Western Public's recovery from the recent low now amounts to 100 per cent with Lone Star showing almost that much improvement.

In the industrials Westinghouse Air Brake was slightly higher in reflection of the earnings showing a moderate profit for the second quarter and the half-year. Armstrong Cork appeared on the board for the first time since early this month, selling more than a point above its last previous price.

CAR LOADINGS DOWN 2,964

WASHINGTON, July 30.—Loadings of revenue freight during the week-ended July 23 totaled 501,130 cars, a decrease of 2,964 cars below the previous week and 241,351 cars under the like week in 1931, according to the American Railway Association.

FILM REVIEW -:- New Pictures in Town, Critics See Them -:- STUDIO NEWS

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

So Goes It

You'll come home late some night and seek your room,
  Switch on the light—review the evening spent
With some dull lad, and stop a bit to fume,
  Because he failed to ease your discontent;
Then you will note my picture, watching still,
  The wistful eyes—the lips that lied so well,
And you will feel a reminiscent thrill—
  Remembering our Heaven and our Hell.

Then you will pause, pick up the slender book
  Of poignant verse I fashioned once for you;
Turn to a page perchance that you may look
  At wistful fragments, half-forgotten, too;

Then you will laugh—and toss your pretty head,
Stifle a yawn—and make your way to bed!

Don Wahn.

Gag

Then there's the silly about the gentleman whose career was one lawsuit after the other. The heat drove him home earlier than usual the other 3 p m., and to his amazement he found his wife sitting on the lap of a stranger

"What's the idea of coming home at three in the afternoon like this?" thundered the stranger in the bulldozing manner.

The husband raced over to his lawyer where he related his experience.

"But tell me, Sam," he said in a worried tone, "can he sue me?"

Lesson in Ethics

From Hollywood comes Ruth Rankin's quip about the movie ham who was telling a group how he happened into a director's office and saw him necking with an actress whose name he mentioned.

"You don't say?" said a listener. "And who was the director?"

"See here!" snapped the gossip, "do you think I'm a cad?"

In Fewer Words

Boiled down to these crisp comments best summed up the passing of F. Ziegfeld. Said Will Rogers:

"He was his own opposition. It never was a case of whether his show was better than anybody else's, but whether his newest show was better than his last one."

J. Mulvaney epitaphs:

"Alphabetically or otherwise—Ziegfeld was always the last word."

Types I'm Glad I'm Not

"What on earth's the matter with that guy? Everybody seems to dislike him."

"Oh, he's all right, I suppose. But he carries a pocket comb and uses it! . . . He wears colored strawhat bands . . . He displays the bankroll in roadhouses but never reaches for the check. . . . He asks celebrities for their autographs . . . He doesn't care what people say of him, so long as they don't ignore him, and he actually believes that the use of a napkin to cover his toothpicking activity excuses it!"

No Kiddin'

The best way, says T. Cook, to make some easy money is to convince another guy he's going to.

It's easier performing miracles.

Cheerful Item

She solicits advertising for one of the papers. On a recent visit to one of the Sixth Avenue "fortune tellers" she learned that her "lucky" number was 507. So when she got her home, she gave her maid 25 cents and instructed her to invest the quarter in the diversion called "Numbers." The maid forgot the exact number, but thought her mistress said to play "707."

It won $150.

The Squelch Proper

They tell of a director on the coast who fired a girl assistant the other day, who took it so to heart, she went home and swallowed poison. First aid, however, saved her life, and the players on the set took up a collection for her. Everybody kicked in with some money, except the director.

"The next time I go skunk hunting," groaned one of the group, "I'm going to use him for bait!"

Parting Shot

It reminds us of the time Harry Reichenbach was informed of the sudden death of a theater manager, with whom he warred. Heart trouble was the cause.

"He probably died," snapped Harry, "because his heart swelled up to the size of a birdseed!"

War Is Gentle 'Scarface' Proves

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Mr. Seibel

Prosperity is due in the automobile business to replace the wreckage in the new film, "Scarface," seen and heard at the Penn Theater yesterday, while the Great War was just a minor scrimmage compared with the battles and sieges Paul Muni has to go through as the big shot of the gangster world. The plate glass industry also is in for a revival, as there are enough windows smashed to declare an extra dividend.

All of this homicide and destruction, of course, has a high and holy purpose. It's a lesson Herr Ben Hecht, the man who made the scenario, wants to teach the American public. "What are you going to do about it?" the public is asked. Then again the "bang, bang, bang," and the "crash, crash, crash," fill the theater. Now we know why the famous war picture was called "All Quiet on the Western Front." It was comparatively so.

In the midst of all this gunplay and splintered glass is Paul Muni, a very fine actor. He slinks and sneers and bullies his way to the throne of the underworld. He murders the rival gangster and takes his moll. His one weakness is the possession of a sister, well played by Ann Dvorak, who isn't inclined to walk the straight and narrow path as a gangster's sister should. So he shoots her man—and then she nearly shoots him—but at last she is shot in the siege of his castle, and he is hanged by a judge who exhibits much indignation while pronouncing the sentence.

Karen Morley is the gunman's moll, and Osgood Perkins does a splendid portrayal of the other gangster. There is more gore and ruin in this picture than in Ypres. For relief there is a Zasu Pitts comedy as funny as anything that Tragic Muse has ever done.

'Human Cannonball' Leaves Kennywood

Kennywood Park patrons will have their final opportunity to see Victor Zacchini, the "human cannonball," shot from his cannon this afternoon and evening. Zacchini's engagement closes tonight. He will be followed by Costi Florescu, who performs acrobatics on top a swaying pole. Florescu's act will be given free afternoon and evening. Benny Burton's dance band will come to the dance pavilion Tuesday, succeeding Will Ryscanck's Orchestra, which closes tonight. Tomorrow's afternoon and evening concerts will be played by Frank Maggio's Orchestra.

Launching of New Liner Shown

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Spectacular views from the air and shore, showing the steamship "Manhattan," biggest passenger liner ever built in America, entering New York Harbor and steaming up the North River to her pier, are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. Among others to greet the new liner is the dirigible Akron, queen of the air and largest aircraft in the world. With all propellers whirring, the Akron flies low, adding the din of her motors to the shrieks from hundreds of sirens and whistles of river craft. Capt. George Fried, of rescue fame, officially receives the Manhattan, which he will command. Mrs. Alice Longworth is there, too, to welcome the Manhattan and to extend congratulations to Capt. Fried. The Manhattan cost $10,000,000 and on her trials made over 22 knots. The Globe Trotter supplies all the details.

Hearst Metrone News is being shown in the Penn, Fulton and several neighborhood theaters.

Billy Sunday, famous evangelist, tackles ol' demon rum in Chicago and tells just what he thinks of prohibition He is the same old Billy with all his original and flaming remarks, his pugnacious gestures and terrifying grimaces.

Out in Sheridan, Wyo., eastern tourists see a rodeo which proves to them that the wild west spirit still lives. There are many thrills as the cowboys ride or attempt to ride horses, steers and even buffalo.

Prince Friederich August, son of the former crown prince of Germany, who has just arrived in America, is seen and heard with his brother, Prince Louis Ferdinand, as they visit Poultney Bigelow on his estate at Malden, N. Y. Bigelow is an old friend of the grandfather of the two princes, former Kaiser William. Bigelow makes a welcoming speech and Prince Friederich thanks his host and announces his trip was financed by his grandfather so he could study the various industries in the United States. His brother, who has been working in Detroit for some time inquires after his grandfather and is told he is in good health. There are a wide variety of intimate views of the two princes.

Striking scenes along the route of the "Tour de France," the longest bicycle race in the world, take you with hundreds of contestants over the first 1,000 of the 2,000-mile run. At the end of this first 1,000 miles the riders are still going strong.

Remarkable playing by a children's orchestra comes from Neuilly, France, where inmates of the town orphanage are entertained. the ages of the little musicians run from 5 to 12 years, but every one is a proficient artist. The orchestra is directed by Mlle. Desjardine who wields the baton as her charges gives a perfect rendition of some difficult operatic music.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The production plans of the Messrs. Shubert for the coming season run considerably to tune drama. Contemplated are three revues, "The Forgotten Man," with book by J. P. McAvoy; "The Passing Show of 1933" and "Greenwich Village Follies." Coming if they come will be musical versions of "Cyrano de Bergerac," Clyde Fitch's "Beau Brummel," "The Yellow Jackets," to be entitled "Land of Smiles"; Fred Stone's "Smiling Faces," and a mooners." Non-musical plays planned include "Napoleon Intervenes," "Business With America," "Autumn Crocus," "Sexes and Sevens" and "A Trip to Pressburg," all having their sources of origin on the far side of the Atlantic.

Vicki Baum, author of "Grand Hotel," has sold a story called "The Shining Shark," to Paramount for screen production, but nothing has been said about the cast, perhaps because the matter of adaptation must first be attended to.

Plan Complete For Stock In Pitt

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Edwin Vail, a capital character actor and later director of the George Sharp Stock Company at the Pitt Theater, has been in town for several weeks, planning to reopen that theater for the coming season, and it seems everything will be ready to raise the curtain the week of August 29. As there has been no stock company in Pittsburgh for a year, during which time a fine crop of new plays has ripened for use by such an organization, and as there will be only one legitimate theater at top prices during the coming season, Manager Vail should have every opportunity to attract a good clientele to the popular Pitt.

For his opening attraction he is negotiating for a play that will be a big surprise and ought to prove a tremendous hit. He has lined up a number of other comedies and dramas for presentation, among them "Cynara," "Mrs. Moonlight," "The Left Bank," "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," "Once in a Lifetime," "Philip Goes Forth," "Michael and Mary," "As Husbands Go," "Blessed Event," "The House Beautiful," "Bridal Wise," "Riddle Me This" and "Private Lives."

Other plays in prospect are "Camille" in period costume with a guest star, "Way Down East," "The Old Homestead," and "The Return of Peter Grimm." Several well-known names of guest stars will soon be announced, as well as the personnel of the company, which will be entirely different from the old Sharp roster. Pittsburgh will greet with jo, the return of a stock company to the Pitt Theater during the forthcoming season.

Barbara Weeks Has New Lead Role

Barbara Weeks, who has just completed the feminine lead in Columbia's "By Whose Hand?" has been assigned the heroine part in "White Eagle," Buck Jones' next starring vehicle for the company. Wallace MacDonald will do the 'heavy' and Jim Thorpe, former world's famous athlete and Carlisle football player has already been signed for the featured role of the Indian chief.

'New Morals for Old' In Sheridan

"New Morals for Old," with Robert Young, Margaret Perry and Lewis Stone, begins today in the Sheridan Square. The story, a fast moving affair, deals with today's youth and its amusements and problems.

BITS OF LIFE All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

The Tip

SOME TWO months ago, five men of Wall street sat in a large office and talked gloomily of times and conditions. Each of them had been very wealthy in days gone by and, while none was actually impoverished at the moment, they all felt the depression very keenly. All of them had lived up to their large incomes—and they were now finding it very tough to live down to their small ones.

One of the men gazed thoughtfully out of the window.

"Hoover will have to be elected, boys," he said. "Otherwise I don't know what will hapen to our street. I look for a 15-point rise in plenty of stock between August 15th and the first of September. That should help the Hoover candidacy some, but I'm wondering if that will be enough to defeat Roosevelt."

Another one shook his head.

"I doubt it," he returned. "Roosevelt looks far too strong to me at the moment. They tell me the odds are now 8 to 5 in his favor, and that must mean something. I hate to see it, but it seems to me that the handwriting's on the wall."

A third sighed heavily.

"Boys," he asserted, "I can't understand the whole thing. When I close my eyes and think back a mere three years, I get just a little jittery. Remember those times when a phone call was a complete day's work in hot weather? And a wire was all that was necessary from Palm Beach during the cold weather?

"There were other angles, too. Plenty of them. Remember how our wives never squawked if we spent a little something on another woman—and our sweethearts never raised too much of a rumpus if we handed a fur coat to the wife? Of course you do.

"But now what have we got? Headaches, that's all. Our sweethearts are gone and our wives are driving us crazy. Business is rotten. What's going to be, boys? What's going to be?"

A fourth man—we'll call him Bill—suddenly slapped his desk.

"Fellows," he cried, "we've got to snap out of this. We're sitting around here and talking like a bunch of high school boys whose team has just lost the big football game. Things may be tough, but they're not as bad as our minds are making them.

"We've got to stop mooning around and talking in this fashion. We've got to snap out of it."

The first friend regarded him wearily.

"That's okay with us, Bill. And since you're the smart guy of the bunch, you suggest something."

Bill hesitated. Then—

"All right. I'll suggest something—and you can take it from me that it's the right something. What we all need is a vacation. We're getting into a rut. What we need is a touch of the good old days. And the sooner the better.

"Each one of us has a boat. At least, I think we each still have one. Am I right?"

He looked around.

"I still have mine," said the first friend. "Haven't had it out in a year, though."

"Same with me," stated the second.

"Me, too," came from the third.

"I've got one of the finest yachts around," chirped the fourth. "You know that, Bill. I don't want to sell it at these prices—but who can afford to run it?"

Bill grinned.

"That's just it," he said. "One of us can't afford to run your yacht alone, but if the five of us chipped in, we could take it out and enjoy the doggondest vacation we've had in a long, long time. We'd leave our own boats just where they are and engage a crew for yours. With the five of us sharing the expense, nobody would feel it too strongly.

"We'll take two or three weeks away from Wall street and cruise around to our hearts' content. We'll lay in the best booze supply we can get and we'll engage the finest cook that money can buy.

"In other words, we're going to do exactly as we did in the days before the crash knocked all of us for a loop. Plenty of days of sunshine, and a chance to get out of the rut into which we seem to have fallen. How does the idea strike you?"

In a few seconds, it was evident that the idea was a honey. The five men looked and acted as though they had suddenly become five children. They slapped one another's backs and blessed Bill for his suggestion. It was exactly what the doctor would have ordered. This was going to be a tonic that they had all needed for some time.

They celebrated by knocking off for the afternoon and going to the nearest speakeasy to celebrate. They had been doing the same thing for almost two years, but they hadn't been celebrating . . .

Within a few days, everything was set. The large yacht they were going to use was hurriedly placed in first-class service. It was a huge affair, as such affairs go, and required the service of eight men—including the cook—as a crew. When everything was in readiness, the five Wall street men sailed away.

And what a time they had! They cruised along the coast and anchored as fancy dictated. They had their champagne cocktails for breakfast, and followed breakfast with some choice champagne cocktails. When they felt like fishing, they used champagne cocktails for bait.

It was a set rule that none of the five was to discuss business or conditions, under penalty of a severe fine. Thus, unless they were seasick, they talked of nothing but the most pleasant things. Far away from the depression, they acted as they had in past days. They strutted about, stuffed themselves with the best of food—and found happiness written all over the horizon.

But alas, and a lack of time! They spent almost three weeks on that grand vacation and regretfully ordered the captain to head for home. The night before they landed, Bill sat on deck with his four cronies.

"Boys," he said, "I think we'll all agree that we had one swell time. I think it has done all of us a world of good, and if we're all a little broker than when we started, what difference does it make?

"The only thing that remains to be done now is to tip the crew. There are six men, the captain and the cook. I think we should tip each man $25—and give the cook at least $100. That would take care of everyone but the captain.

"He deserves a really decent tip. How much can we afford to give him?"

That worried look again crept into the men's faces. They were all plenty broke and any additional expense would be in the nature of a great strain. The captain had to be tipped well. As gentlemen, they understood that. But how to do it?

After an hour's discussion they reached a happy decision. They gave the captain the boat! . . .

'First Year' Is Feature in Stanley

By EDWARD W. GOSS

One of the smoothest romantic comedies to arrive in a Pittsburgh cinema palace in many a moon is on display in the Stanley. It's "The First Year," co-starring Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell.

There is no ungainly striving for comedy effect, the cast is adept and the story a "natural." The film does not attempt to create "tense situations" as a big majority of the movie goers have come to know them.

The story is a big factor in the success of the picture. It concerns itself with the problems of a young couple, portrayed by Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, during their first year of married life. The usual tiresome cocktail parties, nightclubs and home-wreckers are lacking, therefore affording the principals an opportunity to act naturally.

Janet and Farrell deserve something big for their work. Farrell is more than convincing in his role of "first year" husband. He is not one of those artificial "everloving" lads. Instead he shows his awkwardness and "throws the dog" when he has guests who should be properly impressed. Janet never lags behind. She does a masterful portrayal of the young wife who wants "things to be nice"

Following the feature picture is a short murder mystery.

BUCS, PHILLIES CLASH TWICE

SPORT COMMENT

By Harry Keck, Sports Editor

Red Mason Back.
Now a Chicagoan.
Young at 64.

Likes His New Town.
Goes for the Cubs.
And the Hosses.

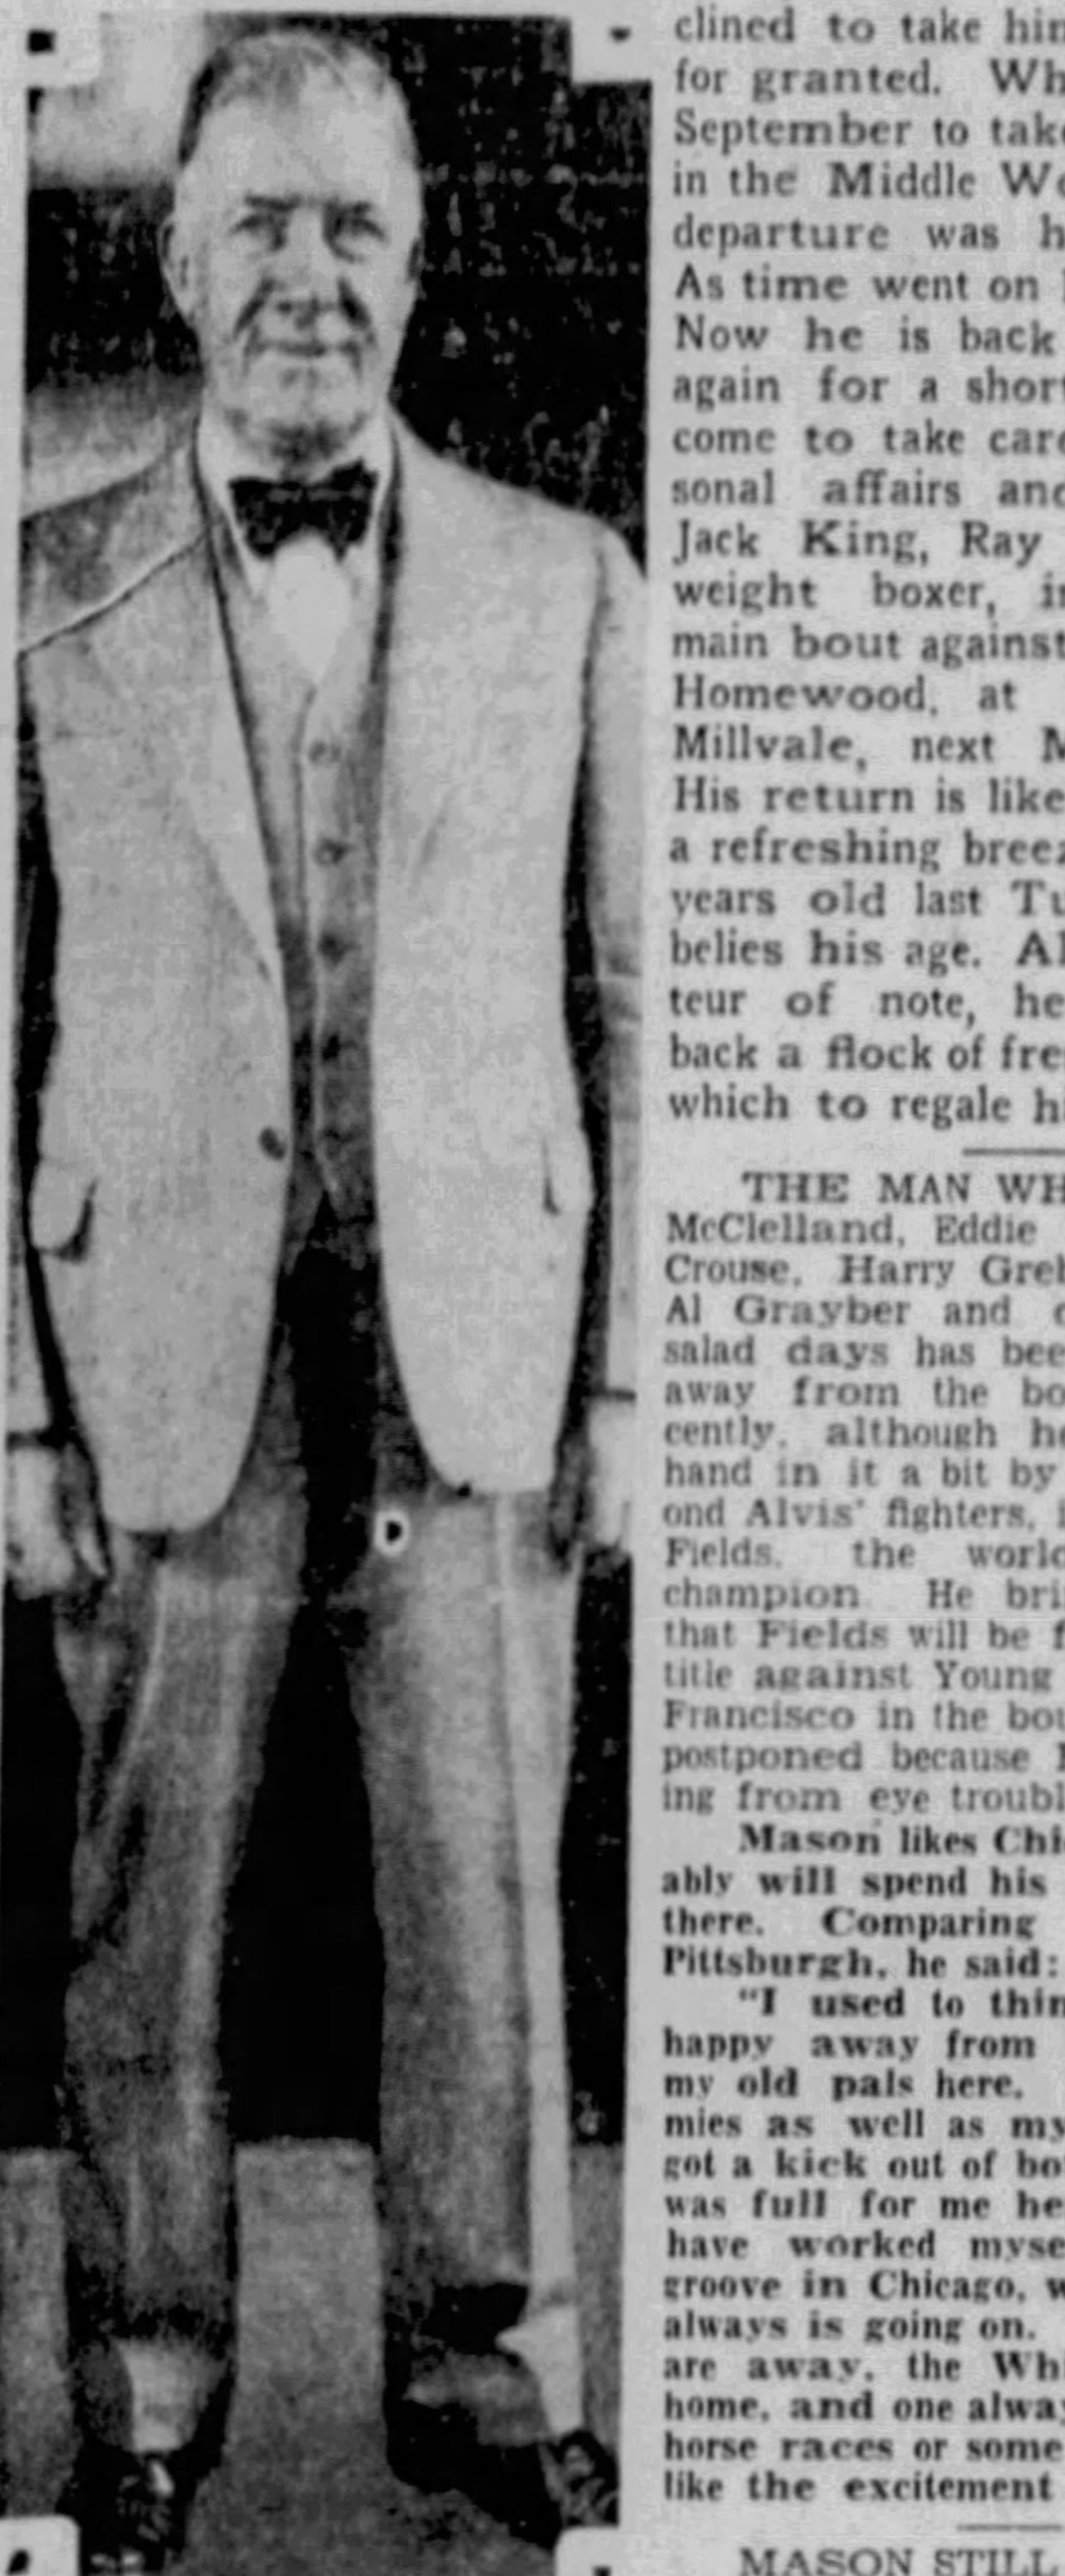
THINGS ARE DIFFERENT THERE

FOR MANY YEARS, James (Red) Mason was the outstanding figure in the local fistic realm. Now he resides in Chicago, where he is helping to care for an ailing sister and brother.

When Mason was with us, day in and out, we were inclined to take him more or less for granted. When he left last September to take up his abode in the Middle Western city, his departure was hardly noticed. As time went on he was missed. Now he is back in our midst again for a short stay, having come to take care of some personal affairs and also handle Jack King, Ray Alvis' welterweight boxer, in the latter's main bout against Billy Holt, of Homewood, at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night. His return is like the arrival of a refreshing breeze. Sixty-four years old last Tuesday, Mason belies his age. Always a raconteur of note, he has brought back a flock of fresh stories with which to regale his listeners.



JAMES (RED) MASON
As He Appears Today, Aged 64.

THE MAN WHO piloted Jack McClelland, Eddie Kennedy, Buck Crouse, Harry Greb, Johnny Ray, Al Grayber and others in their salad days has been more or less away from the boxing game recently, although he has kept his hand in it a bit by helping to second Alvis' fighters, including Jackie Fields, the world welterweight champion. He brings back word that Fields will be fit to defend his title against Young Corbett in San Francisco in the bout already twice postponed because Fields is suffering from eye trouble.

Mason likes Chicago. He probably will spend his remaining days there. Comparing Chicago with Pittsburgh, he said:

"I used to think I'd never be happy away from Pittsburgh and my old pals here. I had my enemies as well as my friends, but I got a kick out of both. Life always was full for me here. However, I have worked myself into a new groove in Chicago, where something always is going on. When the Cubs are away, the White Sox are at home, and one always can go to the horse races or some other place. I like the excitement of it all."

MASON STILL IS busy at his old task of trying to beat the baseball gamblers. Almost daily he is at the baseball park. The Cubs are his favorites, as they are with most Chicagoans. The fans in that city are clannish. On the South Side, they are loyal to the Sox, and cheer when the scoreboard shows the Cubs taking a licking. At the Cubs' park, they can't see anything but the Cubs. Red also still is a vociferous rooter, as he was when he attended the games at Forbes Field. In this connection, he tells a funny story. He says:

"You know, Chicago is the greatest racket city in the country. They haven't overlooked a bet. Why, one day when I was rooting my head off for the Cubs and my bet, one of the fans came to me and wanted to know how much I was getting for yelling for the Cubs.

"WHEN THE PIRATES come to town, I shift and root for them. That's the only time I switch, although I still have a warm spot left in my heart for John McGraw's old club, the Giants. Last Sunday, when the Pirates and Cubs played a doubleheader before the largest crowd I've ever seen at a baseball game, I was going strong for the Pirates, and what do you suppose happened?

"ONE OF THE gamblers came down to me and offered me a bottle of pop. Shortly afterward, I got a bottle of root beer. Then another drink. Then they began feeding me sandwiches. Finally, just about the time I was foundering, a light dawned upon me. I was being kept so busy drinking and eating that I didn't have time to yell. Then I tumbled to myself and refused all offerings.

"The boys took me for quite a ride when I first began to haunt the Cubs' park. They bet differently there than they do here. In Pittsburgh a bettor is satisfied to make a bet and ride with it on the game. Not so out there. They play them close to the vest in Chicago. They start off picking a team. If it gets a few runs behind they make another bet to hedge. If their first team ties the score or goes ahead again they hedge some more. They're satisfied to wind up winning a $10 note. It's a business with them. Before I got the hang of it, it cost me a lot of money."

MASON DID SOME fanning with Manager George Gibson while the Pirates were in Chicago. They recalled Eddie Mensor, an outfielder who was with the club when Gibby was catching. Eddie was just a sub, and, according to Gibby, one of the freshest kids ever on the payroll of the Corsairs. One day a local sports scribe went down to the dugout to get a drink of water from the cooler, and Mensor dumped the entire bucket of waste water over him. He was continually riding the regulars on the bench and in other ways acting in typical fresh busher fashion.

CHICAGO HAS GONE Hoochie-Kootchie, according to the silvery-haired Mason. And all over a 17-year-old kid jockey named Silvio Coucci (pronounced Kootchie), who has been performing wonders at the Arlington Park track. Coucci, it will be remembered, rode Gusto to those startling victories in the American Derby and the Arlington Classic. He has been a consistent winner and has developed a following which bets on him rather than on the horse he rides. The other day, Coucci finished in the money in six events.

THE ARLINGTON PARK race track is one of the finest sights Mason ever has seen. He knew its owner, John Hertz, the taxicab magnate, back in the old days when Hertz was the manager of Benny Yanger, the fighter.

Mason predicts a fine future for Jack King, whom he will second here. He says he first met King at Hot Springs, Ark., in the same gymnasium in which he first glimpsed Tommy Freeman, who was destined to become the welterweight champion and now, as a middleweight, is wreaking so much havoc against our best performers. Years ago, Freeman's uncle and manager, Bob Sangster, who still handles him, brought Tommy to Mason when the latter was at the resort with the late Harry Greb, and he had Freeman work out with Harry.

"Wouldn't it be funny," Mason ruminates, "if King should turn out to be as good a fighter as Freeman?"

MASON STILL GETS a lot of kick out of "ribbing" at the fights, and is as well known at the Chicago ringsides as he was here.

The mob got on a referee the other night. After the din had quieted down between rounds, Mason rose in his seat and made an announcement of his own, entirely out of keeping with the dignity of his 64 years, that brought down the house.

"The referee," he yelled, "wishes to thank you for your kind applause!"

YES, IT'S REFRESHING to have James-the-Red back in our midst again, if only for a few days. Welcome home, James. Welcome home, we say, because Pittsburgh always will be home to you, no matter how much you may come to like Chicago.

VICE PRESIDENT TO OFFICIATE IN PAGEANT

LOS ANGELES, July 30.—(AP.)—Vice President Charles Curtis lent the official dignity of the United States to the opening of the Olympic games today.

Lieut. Calnan

He dismissed all talk of politics upon his arrival yesterday with a gesture and immediately launched into the spirit of the world-wide sports carnival which will take the spotlight with the opening ceremony in the packed Olympic stadium before 105,000 persons.

A 2,000-piece band will play the national anthem, joined by a choir of 1,000 voices as the Vice President appears in the huge concert bowl escorted by Count Henri De Baillet-Latour, president of the International Olympic Federation, and William May Garland, president of the Olympic committee.

2,000 IN PARADE

Then will follow the grand parade of the nations with 2,000 of the world's finest athletes passing in review in their multi-colored uniforms. Mr. Curtis will be introduced to the vast assembly by Mr. Garland as they stand in the tribune of honor.

In one hushed minute he will speak 16 words in behalf of President Herbert Hoover:

"I proclaim open the Olympic games of Los Angeles, celebrating the tenth Olympiad of the modern year."

And thus, the international classic, a renewal of the Greek games of old, will officially start. A fanfare from trumpeters in the peristyle will answer his words. The Olympic salute from 10 cannons will echo and resound through the great bowl.

The Olympic torch atop the peristyle will be lighted as the choir chants the Olympic hymn. The official banner of the games will be hoisted to the top of the mast, as 2,000 doves burst forth from the entrance archway of the stadium.

Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the University of California, will deliver the dedication address and pronounce the benediction, after which Lieut. George C. Calnan, U. S. N., representing the United States in his fourth Olympic games, will take the oath of the international games in behalf of the athletes of the world.

FINN PLEA FAILS

The ceremony will be staged in a flag-bedecked setting, with 42 nations of the world represented in the parade.

Yesterday preliminary activities were marked by the attempt and failure of the Finnish federation to get a hearing on the floor of the International Amateur Athletic Congress on the rejection of the entry of Paavo Nurmi, greatest distance runner the world has

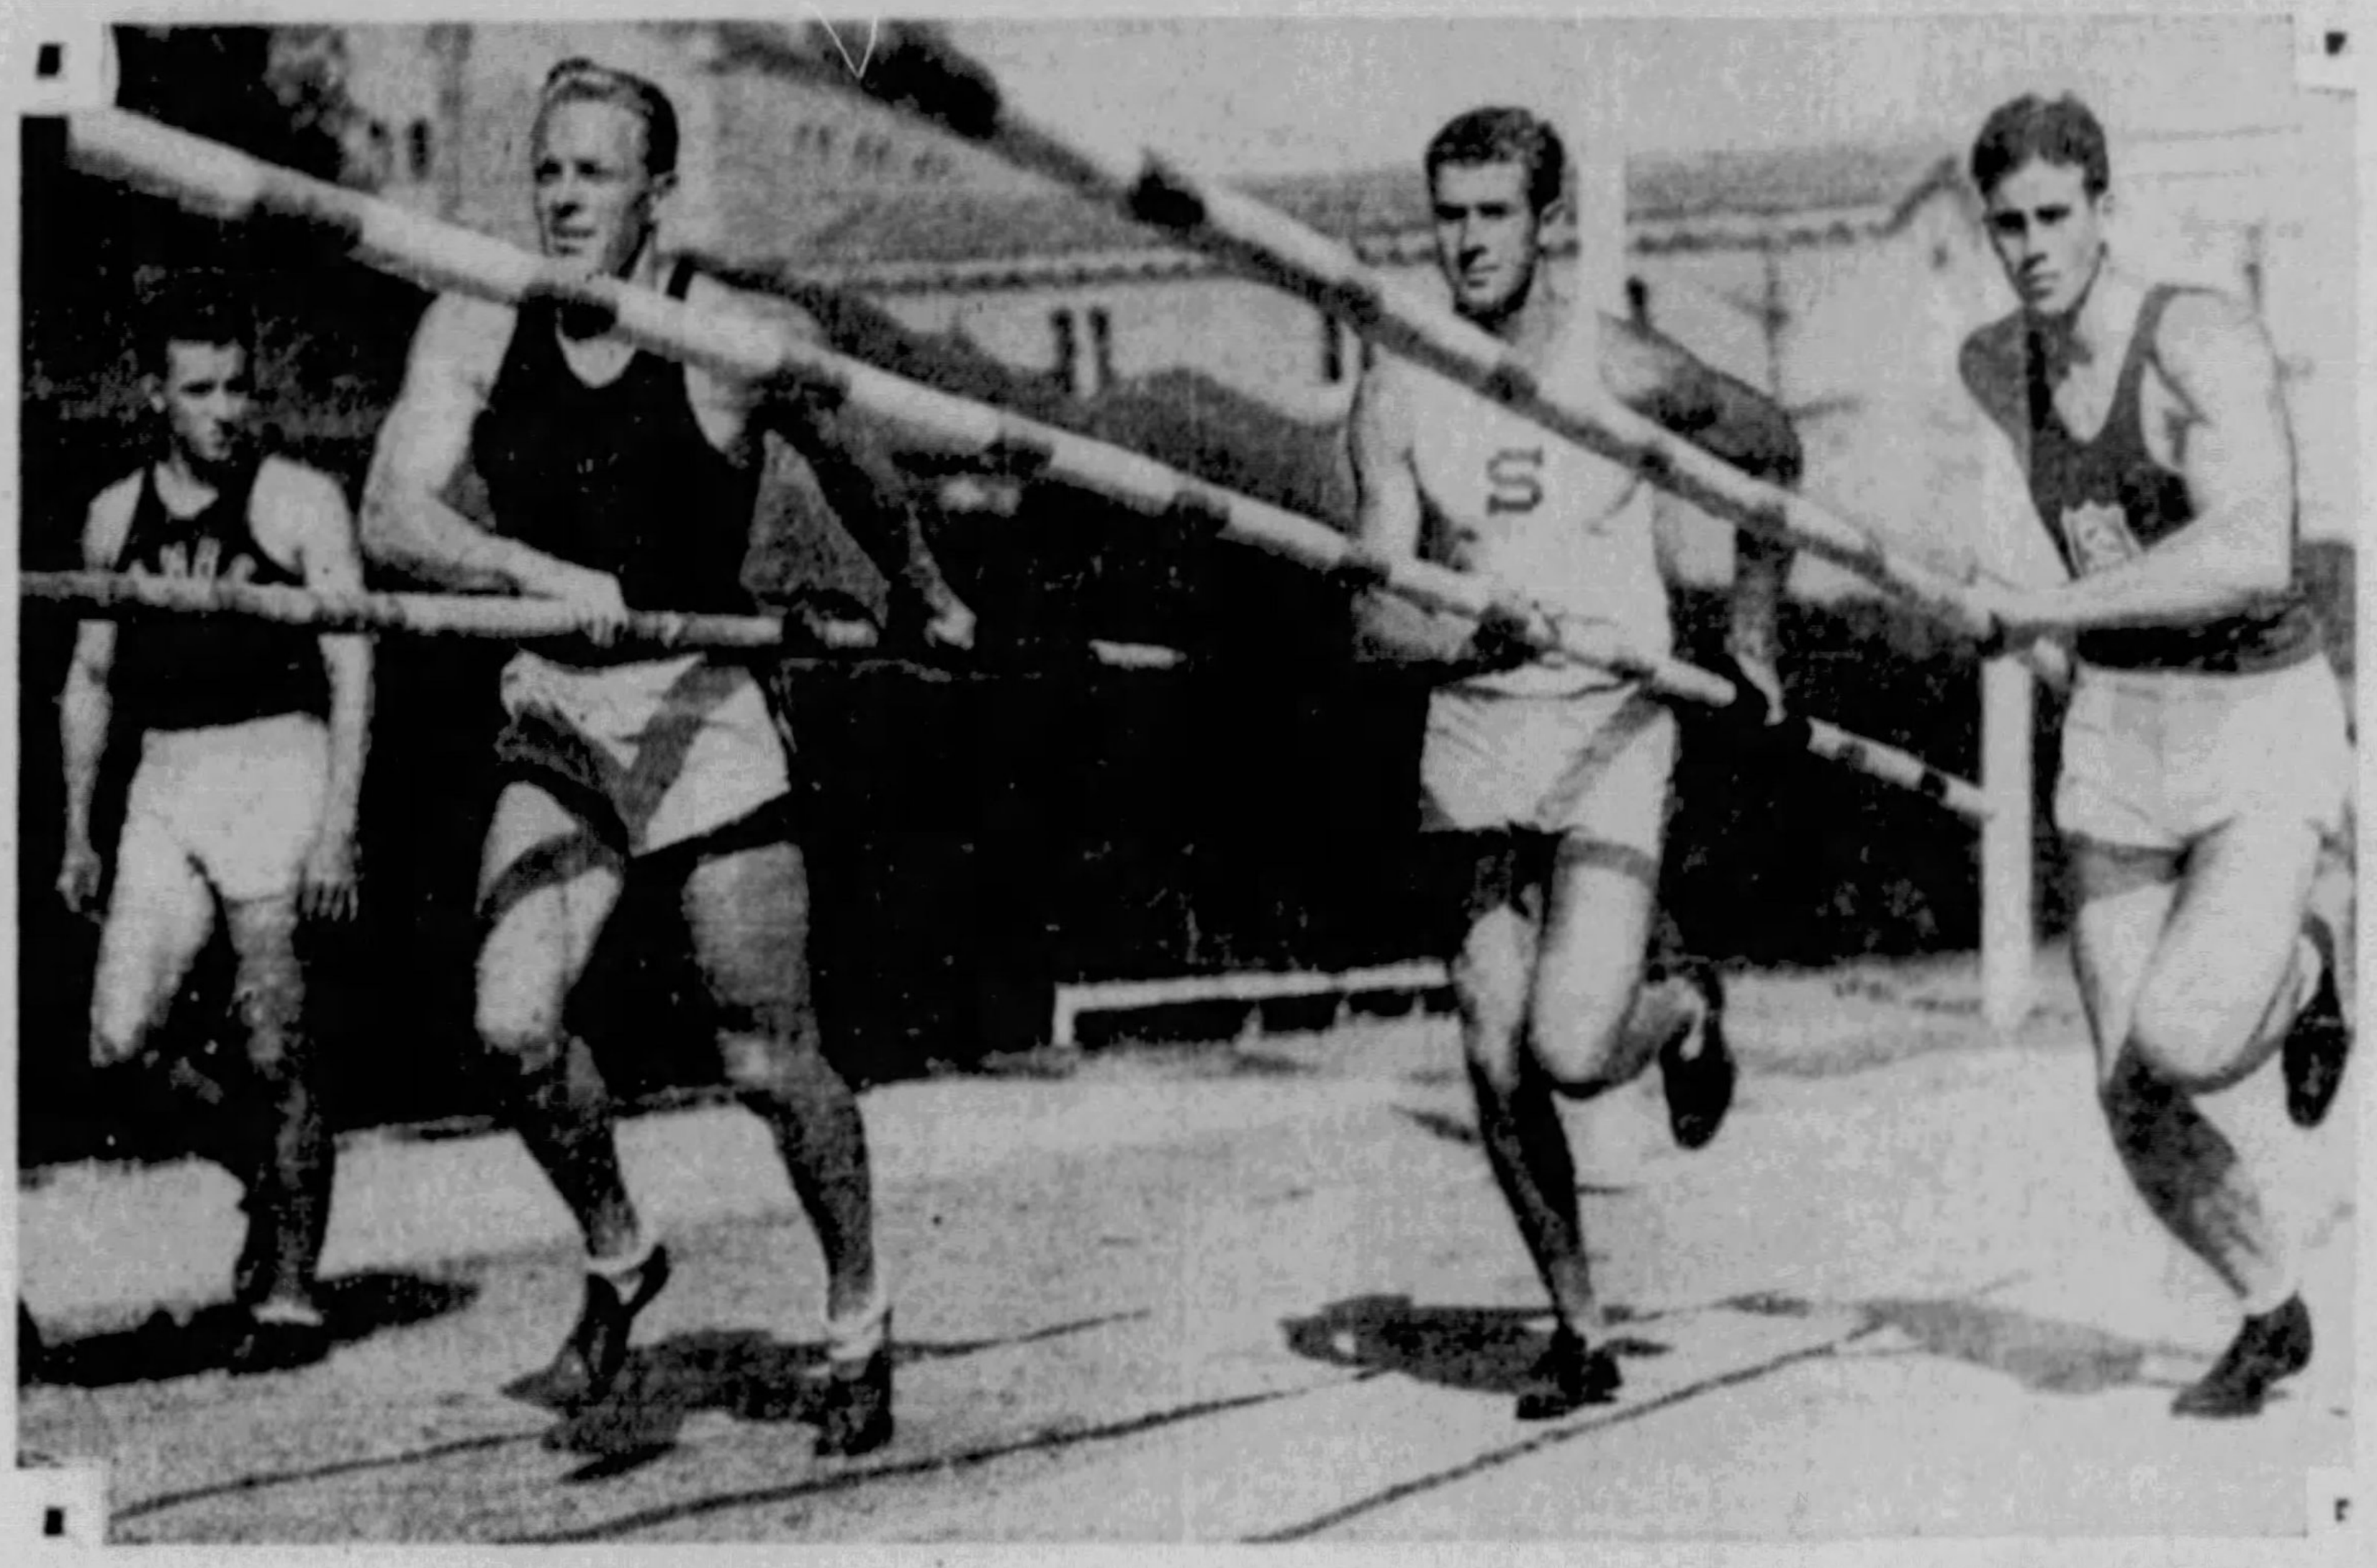
Uncle Sam's Pole Vaulters Set for Olympic Games



GEORGE JEFFERSON BILL MILLER BILL GRABER

The Tenth Modern Olympic Games get under way at Los Angeles this afternoon, with the United States well fortified for the fray along many fronts. Graber, of Southern California, is considered a sure winner in the pole vault, having leaped 14 feet 4⅜ inches in the trials. Miller, of Stanford, and Jefferson, University of California, finished second and third, close behind the sensational Graber in his world record jump. EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE DUKE OF ALBA—The present Duke of Alba, most blue-blooded member of the aristocracy of Spain, was born in 1878. In addition to all of his titles of nobility, he is an attorney-at-law, a former Senator by right of birth, and the owner of many baronies and extensive estates, as well as the holder of the most exclusive decorations by the governments of Europe. The Duke has inherited all of his titles by right of being descended from 14 grandees of Spain. A BURROWED CASTLE IN SPAIN—Twenty-five years ago, Lino Bueno, whom the inhabitants of Alcolea del Pinar affectionately call "Tio" (Uncle), was a homeless drain digger. In order to provide himself with a home he started to belabor a huge rock towering over the highway back in 1907. Following his trade in the day time and devoting his leisure to his homestead work, he succeeded in converting the rock into a house for himself and family by dint of the most patient labor, lasting 25 years. The house, hewn out of the solid rock with the aid of a pickaxe alone, contains seven large rooms, a kitchen, benches, shelves, portals, dormitories, windows, a balcony, and other furnishings, all hewn out of the rock. The Lino's casa-roca has attracted the attention of the government, and the old picturesque "campesino" has been awarded a life pension and a medal for his persistence. A DEATH-DEFYING STUNT—Martin Barcaittegui, famous in tauromachy under his boyhood name of Martincho, acquired undying fame by incredible feats of temerity in the bull ring. A favorite stunt of his was to await the rushing bull while seated in a chair, and to dispatch it in the same position while his feet were shackled with leg irons that prevented his slightest movement. The Spanish painter Goya immortalized one of those moments in his famous painting of Martincho in the ring.

PHILADELPHIA, July 30.—Showing no letup in their fighting spirit, despite the strain of dual bills, the league-leading Pirates today were set for their fifth doubleheader of the week, the locale to be Baker Bowl, with its notorious rightfield fence.

Bill Harris

George Gibson and fast-going Pittsburghers made a perfect landing here last night and this morning they were refreshed and ready for the task at hand. Their remarkable behavior at the Polo Grounds in New York wherein they copped six victories in seven battles with the Giants, has given the Freebooters a heavy prestige all over the baseball world, but the Pirates apparently will not allow their successes to run into overconfidence.

Truly it has been a red-letter week for the Pirates. They started out with a dual bill in Chicago, their fighting spirit in the second clash with the Cubs preventing what might have been a disastrous double defeat. Monday they rested in Pittsburgh and on the same evening hopped into Pullmans again for the jaunt to New York. Their achievements in their seven struggles at the Polo Grounds will stand as an outstanding chapter in the history of Pittsburgh baseball. Gibby's boys lost the first clash of the set and then toppled the Giants six times in succession.

The Buccos put a fitting climax on their seige of New York yesterday as they came from behind in the eighth inning to land a 4-to-3 success. Adolf Luque had the first-placers blanked going into the eighth when the Waner Act went over with some special trimmings. Their latest victory gave the Bucs a lead of six full games over the Cubs, who were idle.

KREMER, SWIFT READY

Manager Gibson has Remy Kremer and Bill Swift ready for mound duty today. Larry French originally was slated to hurl in one of the games, but the star southpaw will not be in action today. His father, George P. French, died yesterday at the family home in Sutherlin, Ore.

French will not attend the funeral and expects his mother to visit him in Pittsburgh after the Pirates return from their present Eastern invasion.

The Pirates expect to look at the slants of Jumbo Jim Elliott in one of the games as Manager Shotton generally has the big lefthander primed to open a Pittsburgh series. Ray Benge may flip the other contest.

Adam Comorosky's single was the chief support of the Waner Act yesterday as the Pirates put over their eighth-inning rally to beat the Giants. An error by

U. S. PLAYERS TRAIL IN STRUGGLE FOR DAVIS CUP

FRENCH STARS SCORE SWEEP IN SINGLES

BULLETIN.

ROLAND GARROS STADIUM, PARIS, July 30.—The American doubles team of John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison and the French combination of Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon were all even after two sets in their Davis Cup challenge round match here today. The Americans won the first set, 6-3, and the French the second, 13-11.

PARIS, July 30.—(AP.)—The United States today had only the slimmest of fighting chances as it renewed its Davis Cup argument with France's ageing, but brilliant defenders.

Beaten back in both of yesterday's opening singles battles, the invaders faced the necessity of sweeping through today's doubles and the final singles tomorrow if France is to be separated from the world tennis trophy it has held since 1927.

YANKS FAVORITES

Today's match found Uncle Sam's star doubles duo, Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn, facing Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon.

The result was regarded as a toss-up. Two days ago the American pair was a pronounced favorite to defeat any combination selected by France.

The myth of Ellsworth Vines, Jr.'s invincibility was well exploded in yesterday's opening match, when the tall Californian was beaten by Jean Borotra, 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4.

Borotra, it was, who had begged to be left off the French team because of his advanced years.

All the Bounding Basque did was trounce America's young champion in far more convincing fashion than Henri Cochet displayed in defeating Wilmer Allison in the second match. Cochet's victory was by scores of 5-7, 7-5, 7-5, 6-2.

BOROTRA TOO STRONG

Vines faced the crisis of his short, spectacular career on foreign courts when, returning from a rest after the third set, he attempted to pull the match out of the fire, but he failed against the unconquerable spirit of Borotra, who fought for every point as though his life depended on it.

Vines tried to win with strokes alone and they were not enough to match the racing feet, the deft racquet and the cunning strategy of the veteran. Age beat youth to a frazzle.

Parker Meets Lott Again in Final Round

OTTAWA, Canada, July 30.—(AP.)—Milwaukee's 16-year-old tennis meteor, Frankie Parker, sought to add another title to his imposing string today when he engaged George Lott, Jr., American Davis Cup veteran, in the final round of the Canadian championships.

Already victorious over Lott in two tournaments this summer, Parker was favored to turn the trick again. He played some of the greatest tennis ever seen in Canada in yesterday's semi-final victory over Walter Martin, of Canada, 6-0, 6-2, 6-3. Lott eliminated Marcel Rainville in four sets to reach the final.

Lott and Rainville won the doubles title, defeating the Canadian pair, Gilbert Nunns and Walter Martin, 7-5, 6-4, 4-6, 6-1.

EDDIE JACOBS FINALIST AT SEABRIGHT

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 30.—(AP.)—The final match in men's doubles featured today's program of the forty-fifth annual Seabright tennis tournament.

Opposed in the championship match was the young southern pair, Robert Grant, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and John McDiarmid, of Fort Worth, Tex., and Samuel Gilpin, of Philadelphia, and Eddie Jacobs, of Baltimore.

Sidney Wood, Jr., won the men's singles title with a four set victory yesterday over Gregory Mangin. Helen Jacobs and Sarah Palfrey captured the women's doubles.

Helen Jacobs faces Josephine Cruickshank, of Santa Ana, Cal., in the final of the women's singles.

OAKMONT STAR LEADS FIELD

By TOM BIRKS

Starting out before the wind hampered play, Mrs. Sarah Fownes Wadsworth, of the Oakmont Country Club, won the Pittsburgh Field Club invitation tournament yesterday with a low score of 89, to beat out Barbara Warmcastle, home star, and Mildred Underwood, of Nemacolin, who finished with scores of 90.

Mrs. C. S. Lewera, of the Field Club, and Mrs. H. W. Christie, No. 1 team player of the Butler Country Club, tied for third place at 93, while Lois Hollander, the young Westmoreland Country Club star, had a 94.

The low net prize went to Mrs. W. J. Curley, of the Field Club, who broke 100 for the first time, and had a net 79.

The Shannopin women's golf team won the first of a series of two matches with Highland at Shannopin yesterday, 33-20.

Chilly Sauce

By Charles J. Doyle

The darkest shadows and the brightest high lights in the multicolored career of George Gibson were thrown upon the form of the big Canadian in the same ball park, but with 11 long years separating the contrasting touches.

In August of 1921, the Pirates under the leadership of Gibson lost a pennant as they dropped five straight games to the Giants on the Polo Grounds. The Pirates of July 1932 have set aside the old verdict — who knows but what the Buccos figuratively clinched a flag this week in the Vale of Coogan's Bluff?

Gibby waited a long time for his day. When he suddenly stepped out of the managerial picture in 1922, George did it like a man—he might have said a lot of things, but he remained incommunicado to all interviewers, who sought to have him say something startling. His patience seems to have been rewarded as he laid waste whatever hopes the Giants might have had concerning a flag for this year.

Gibby's rejuvenated ball team is head and shoulders above the picturesque club that remained on top through false pretense for months of the 1921 race. Every department of the present combination shows much greater strength, with the possible exception of the receiving department; and the comparison probably holds good here, also.

Walter Schmidt, one of the smartest catchers the league has had in many years, was the star receiver of the 1921 outfit, but Walter was out with sickness during some of the crucial days of that summer. Moreover, Schmidt did not have as much power at the plate as that possessed by Earl Grace.

It might be considered a form of lese majeste to hint that Gibson's 1932 model is superior to Bill McKechnie's great club of 1925. I am not ready to make this statement more than a suggestion at present, yet when Lloyd Waner and Comorosky are at their respective posts in the Pittsburgh battle front, I find it very, very difficult to give any edge to the great club of seven years ago which enacted real drama as it gave the city the highest honors of the game.

Two Titles at Stake In South Park Pool

The leading swimming clubs in Western Pennsylvania have entries in the annual Allegheny Mountain Association championships, scheduled this afternoon in the South Park pool. The Kennywood Park Club, Willows Club, Homestead Carnegie Library Club, Coyne A. C., and Homestead Municipal pool are among the prominent clubs enrolled in the various events.

Among the titles to be decided are the 100-meters senior A. M. A. free style championship, for women; and 10-foot board A. M. A. fancy diving championship.

The Rock Bottom Club, of Edgewood, has made arrangements to hold a benefit swimming meet in its pool one week from tomorrow.

Thirdbaseman English also gave the Buccos much assistance. Lloyd Waner opened with a single. Finney ran for Lloyd and Brother Paul also singled, Finney taking second. Vaughan bunted safely filling the bases.

Luque made Traynor foul to Terry in the crisis, but Comorosky singled to left, scoring Finney and P. Waner, Vaughan stopping at second. Suhr's fly to Lindstrom advanced both runners, and then English fumbled Piet's grounder to let Vaughan and Commy register.

HARRIS WINS THIRD

Bill Harris recorded his third victory of the series and his fourth win in the week in the finale with the Giants, but Bill had to come out in the eighth in favor of Steve Swetonic.

Fullis batted for Marshall at the start of the last half of the eighth. The emergency man walked. Leslie batted for Luque and singled to right. Dugas fumbled the ball, Fullis taking third and Leslie reaching second. Swetonic replaced Harris, and Moore fouled out to Traynor. Critz walked, filling the sacks for Ott, but Ott flied to Dugas in short right. Terry drew a pass that forced in a run, but Lindstrom popped to Suhr.

Hogan singled at the start of the ninth, but the Giants could not score. Swetonic brought the game to a close by fanning Pinch-hitter Allen.

The Steel City net campaign lurks at the apex these days as outstanding events of past, present, and future tread one another's heels. Yesterday, Ralph Bald, Mount Lebanon ace, and Bob Madden, driving Schenley star, repeated West Penn triumphs by garnering respectively the Junior and the Boys' crowns of the annual Pittsburgh Center tourney at the P. A. A.

Today, with the pace-setting Edgewood host climaxing the season by invasion of the bailiwick of the runner-up Winged Head crew, the P. T. A. Inter-Club League Section I chase for the Davis Keg fades toward conclusion. On Monday, the third yearly revival of the Pittsburgh Public Parks championships get under way for a week's run on the clay rectangles of Frick and Schenley parks.

In the center jousting, the resourceful and consistent Bald accounted for his Lebanon pal, Southpaw Bob Grier, in brilliantly-fought final Junior fray, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3. Bald earlier downed Bob Burnett, clever Wilkinsburger, 6-1, 6-2, in the semi-finals, while Grier spilled Roy Heckler, of Crafton, 6-3, 6-3. Madden, meeting Lawrence Blatt, College Avenue lad, whom he had erased in love sets in the Western Pennsylvania Boys' wind-up, met sterner opposition than had previously been his lot, but copped decisively, 6-1, 6-4.

The Parks tournament entry list was augmented by names of 19 masculine performers and four feminine aspirants in the course of yesterday, the total roster to date aggregating 35 racqueters in the two classifications.

Last-minute concession on the part of Parks committee officials permits entering of the mixing by telephone at Mayflower 9609 till 2 p. m. today. The men's singles draw will be made this afternoon and pairings will be announced tomorrow morning.

Tilden and Barnes Keep Doubles Title

CHICAGO, July 30.— (AP.)—William T. Tilden, of Philadelphia, and Bruce Barnes, of Texas, kept the national professional doubles tennis championship in America yesterday by routing Karel Kozeluh, of Czechoslovakia, and Albert Burke, France, in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1, 6-3.

Tilden meets Kozeluh with Hans Nusslein, of Germany, challenging his teacher, Roman Najuch, in the semi-finals of the singles championship today. The finals will be played tomorrow.

GRID STAR SIGNED

SEATTLE, Wash., July 30.—(AP.)—The Boston Braves of the National Professional Football League are going in heavily for new talent from gridirons of the northwest. Hank Bernier, Gonzaga University wingman, signed up yesterday and six other men have accepted contracts.

LEGION FRAY TODAY

The Swissvale team, Allegheny County champion, meets Boswell in an inter-district game in the American Legion junior baseball elimination series at Scottdale this afternoon.

Nick Altrock

Baseball's Humorist

Says:

Nick Altrock

CHICAGO, July 30.—It takes all kinds of people to make up a world, including youngsters who want to grow up to be umpires.

Several kiddies have asked me for the recipe and here it is:

First, practice jerking your thumb back. This knack can be required by taking up hitch-hiking in a big way. Next, practice arguing with yourself and always declaring yourself right every time. Then get used to wearing a whiskbroom where most guys carry a flask. And, finally, try and find a blue serge suit that will make you look like a pall bearer and feel like a king.

Put them all together, they spell "Umpire"—and you're welcome to a life like that.

ever known. The Flying Finn's entry was turned down at a meeting of the council of the I. A. F. Thursday in a swift move headed by J. S. Edstrom, of Sweden, president of the organization.

The federation also wrote 32 new world records and three marks equalling world's records into its archives.

Despite bitterness and resentment aroused by the removal of their national hero, the Finns plan to go ahead with their participation in the games, their official spokesman said.

"After being denied what we felt was justice, our first impulse was to withdraw the entire Finnish team, feeling this would have the support of our nation," said L. J. Miettinen, secretary of the Foreign Relations Committee of Finland's A. A. A. A. "We feel now, however, that it would be better, despite our feeling, to go ahead and do our best, relying on future developments to atone for this great wrong to Finland."

TO REMAIN AMATEUR

Nurmi, although he already has been approached on the subject of turning professional for a series of races in the United States and elsewhere, so far has told his friends he will remain an amateur and attempt to clear himself of the charges on which the I. A. A. F. action was based.

His only reaction, aside from keen disappointment, friends added, was to insist he would seek the earliest opportunity to try to shatter all world records for the marathon, for which he has been training for months.

FINNS AROUSED

HELSINGFORS, Finland, July 30.—(AP.)—A great demonstration was staged last night in the streets of Helsingfors on behalf of Paavo Nurmi, the nation's athletic hero, who has finally been barred from participation in the Olympic games in Los Angeles.

Thousands of men marched in a parade through the city with several bands leading the way.

A short and pithy cablegram was sent the Finnish team in California. It read:

"Nurmi or nobody welcome home."

GIANT NEGRO HEAVY HERE FOR BOUTS

Two hundred and twenty-eight pounds of heavyweight fighter arrived in Pittsburgh yesterday to toss a challenge to the local brigade headed by George Panka.

The big fellow is Seal Harris, of Chicago, a Negro, who has been in there with George Godfrey, Primo Carnera, Kenneth Lee, Jack Beasley, Jack Kilrain, Chuck Wiggins, Bill Tate, Big Boy Peterson, Chet Shandel, Eliza Lee, Larry Gains, Long Tom Hawkins, Neil Clisby and others. He came here direct from Reno, Nev., where he helped Max Baer train for his 20-round fight with King Levinsky on July 4.

Harris, a protege of Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion, will box here under the direction of Frank Sutton, well-known hotel man and lifelong friend of Johnson. He stands 6 feet 3½ inches. In addition to boxing, he has taken a fling at wrestling and has toured this country, Canada and Europe. He will begin training on Monday, doing his road work in Greenlee Field and his other training in Bill Edwards' gym. Promoters may reach Sutton at 1401 Wylie avenue, or by calling Court 9506.

Between Rounds

Hickey Park, in Millvale, which switches over to Monday night next week, when it will present Billy Holt and Jack King in the main bout, has signed Battling Gizzy with Chico Cisneros, of Cleveland, for its windup one week from Monday.

Willie Davies will box Nat Litfin in the eight-round semi-final to the Jimmy Belmont-Frankie Goosby 10-rounder at Greenlee Field next Thursday night. Paul Monar will make his professional debut against Johnny Woods in the opener.

Jimmy Cester, of Philadelphia, is the new manager of Tony Falco, who recently split with Phil Glassman.

Mack House, of Wilkes-Barre, is another Negro heavyweight who wants to show his wares here.

Sammy Paris, of the Hill, who recently fought a good 10-round bout with Willie Davies at Fairmont, W. Va., will return there for an eight-rounder with Jimmy (Kid) Smith, August 18. Benny McArthur boxes K. O. Terry in the windup.

Fight Results

At Denver—Ham Jenkins defeated George Nichols, N. B. A. light-heavyweight champion, 10 rounds.

At Hollywood—Fidel LaBarba defeated Varias Millings, 10 rounds.

At Ebbets Field, Brooklyn—Charley Retzlaff-Isadore Gastanaga bout indefinitely postponed.

People With a Wicked Past Shouldn't Judge Others

Is the girl he "played around with" good enough to marry?

He's no angel. He admits it himself. And before he met her, he was just plain rotten. If a gal didn't fall for his line, he oozed out of the picture and found one who did.

And now he's fallen in love with one of 'em; and—don't laugh!—he wants to know whether he can trust her if he slips the platinum hoop on her finger—

Or whether she'll two-time him, because he led her off the straight and narrow.

"How about it? You tell him!

"Dear Sally:

"I wonder if you'll help me out of a most troublesome problem that I have? I hope so, for it has me cornered.

"I happen to be one of those 'wise guys' girls often write to you about. A year ago girls meant nothing to me, in particular. I treated them all alike, whether 'good' or otherwise. If they happened to be good, decent girls, I'd try my best to win them over to think as I did—to 'live today; never mind tomorrow.' Some of them were foolish enough to listen to me. Some were wise enough never to go out with me again.

"I'll admit I was just plain rotten, and I want to pay the full price, now, for my cheap-living past.

"Well, eight months ago I met a wonderful girl. I met her when I was boarding in the town where she lived. Her mother and father are foreign born, but are very much Americanized, well educated and fine people, who live very comfortably.

WORRIED ABOUT FUTURE

"Now, here is my worry.

"One night while we were out riding I forgot myself and pulled my old line on her, and she fell for it. Right away I was sorry about it. I suddenly realized the risk to our happiness, if she should decide to marry me.

"Now eight months have passed, and I am very much in love with her. But, somehow, I am worried about the future. Could I be happy with this girl, knowing her past?

"I am 29 years old and would like to consider getting married next year. Please try to help me, and don't hold anything back. Don't think of anything but the good you will do both of us by giving your advice. Do you think I can be happy with her? Can I depend on her?

"WEBSTER."

Well, well, well! I should snicker!

SHOULD TRUST HER

Why don't you ask whether I think she can be happy with a gent with a past like yours? Never thought of that angle, did you? Well, I'll gamble she has! And if she is willing to trust you, with your long line of cheap affairs, why shouldn't you trust her, with one little mis-step that was your fault?

And let me ask you this:

Do you expect to be a cheap, chasing, cheating husband, because you were immoral in the past? Is that why you're afraid to trust her, for fear she may have ideas like your own?

As a matter of fact, your question sounds to me a good deal like the pot calling the kettle black. If this girl did wrong, so did you, and you have no right to look down on her.

She is no more guilty than you are, and as a matter of fact she is better than you, and far more apt to make good, if you ask me. She didn't go in for wholesale cheap living, and you admit you did. So if she is willing to trust you and pick you off the scrap heap, I can't see any reason why you should hesitate.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Bad Opening Lead

Poor Opening leads often pave the way for end-plays when the Declarer is alert and able to take advantage of the full trick-taking possibilities of his hand, after his opponents have presented him with an otherwise unmakable trick. Frequently the choice of the Opening lead is the difference between the making and the defeat of the contract. It is true that the player charged with the responsibility of the lead is frequently faced with an almost insoluble problem in determining what is the best lead, although generally a study of his holdings, when his partner has not bid, will suggest the best of a choice of evils.

Through the unwise choice of an Opening lead, the Declarer in the hand below was given an opportunity, which he immediately seized, to develop extra tricks in the play of the hand.

South—Dealer
East and West vulnerable

♠ Q 9 4
♡ 10 3
♢ K 9 5 4
♣ A Q 7 3

♠ K 10 3 2
♡ A 6 2
♢ Q 2
♣ K 9 6 5

North
South

♠ J 8 7 6
♡ 8 7
♢ J 7 6
♣ J 10 8 4

♠ A 5
♡ K Q J 9 5 4
♢ A 10 8 3
♣ 2

South	West	North	East
1♡	Pass	2 N T (1)	Pass
4♡ (2)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) North's hand is not strong enough for a Forcing Takeout, and a bid of two no-trump, with the even distribution, better pictures the 2½ honor-tricks than would the alternative bid of two clubs, which partner would infer showed a five-card suit.

(2) With a six-card trump suit and 3½ honor-tricks in the hand, as well as unbalanced distribution, game in hearts appears certain to South. He knows that partner must have at least two hearts, otherwise a suit response would be better to the Opening bid of one heart.

West's best Opening lead against this contract is, no doubt, a small heart. South's strong bidding has precluded the possibility of East holding a heart trick, in view of the fact that West holds the Ace.

In actual play, however, the West who held this hand opened the spade deuce, which was won by the Queen in Dummy, and thus eliminated the possibility of losing any tricks in the spade suit. A trump was then led from Dummy, which was won by West, who returned the suit. South then drew these valuable inferences. West had opened a low card from a suit headed by the King. When again thrown in the lead, he was unwilling to shift to another suit. Therefore, South now drew West's last trump, and decided to play the hand in an attempt to make overtricks, as a squeeze situation would probably develop if the finesse in the club suit was successful. The club deuce was led, and the finesse of the Queen held. The Ace of clubs was then laid down, and South discarded a diamond. He returned to his own hand by ruffing a small club, and cashed the Ace of spades. The remaining cards in the hand were:

♢ K 9 5
♣ 7

♠ K 10
♢ Q 2
♣ K

North
West East
South

♠ J
♣ J

♡ 9 5
♢ A 10 8

South led the 9 of hearts, West discarded a spade, North a diamond, and East the spade Knave. On the last heart, West was compelled to discard the club King. The Dummy played the spade 9, but East could not further defend the hand. He was forced to part with a low diamond to prevent the club 7 in Dummy winning a trick. South then proceeded to win the remaining tricks with his diamonds, the extra tricks being a direct result of an ill considered Opening lead.

TODAY'S QUESTION

What is the significance of a Jump response to partner's Take-out Double?

Answer—A Jump response to partner's Takeout Double shows about 2 honor-tricks, possibly a rather weak suit if a major.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Introductions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I read your discussion of introductions, but you did not mention relatives. What is the correct form to use in introducing a young man to my aunt? In my case my aunt has two children by a former marriage who have kept their father's name, a boy 14, and a girl of 16. The boy is too old to be called master, isn't he?

2—When eating in a public place, when should one place the napkin in one's lap? I have noticed some people who unfold the napkin directly as they sit down, and others who wait until they are served.

THANK YOU.

1—Family introductions are usually done with less formality than are other kinds of introductions. The expression "this is" is often used, or the introductions may be made like any other introduction. It depends on whom we are introducing, and what we wish to register in the introduction.

When you introduce a young man to your aunt, you might say, "Aunt Mary, may I present Mr. Thompson?" or "Aunt Mary, this is Mr. George Thompson," or "Aunt Mary, Mr. Thompson."

When introducing the girl of 16 or the boy of 14 (or either thereabouts) it is, I think, gracious to give their titles . . . Miss or Mr. . . . and the first as well as the last name. This gives the introduction the dignity it should have, and the naming of both names gives a certain graceful informality that is appropriate to the ages. "Mrs. Wood, this is Mr. Arthur Stewart," or "Miss Graham, this is Miss Mary Postley."

2—There isn't any definite rule about this, but it always seems more convenient if we place our napkin on our lap directly after we sit down. This, obviously, does not hold up service.

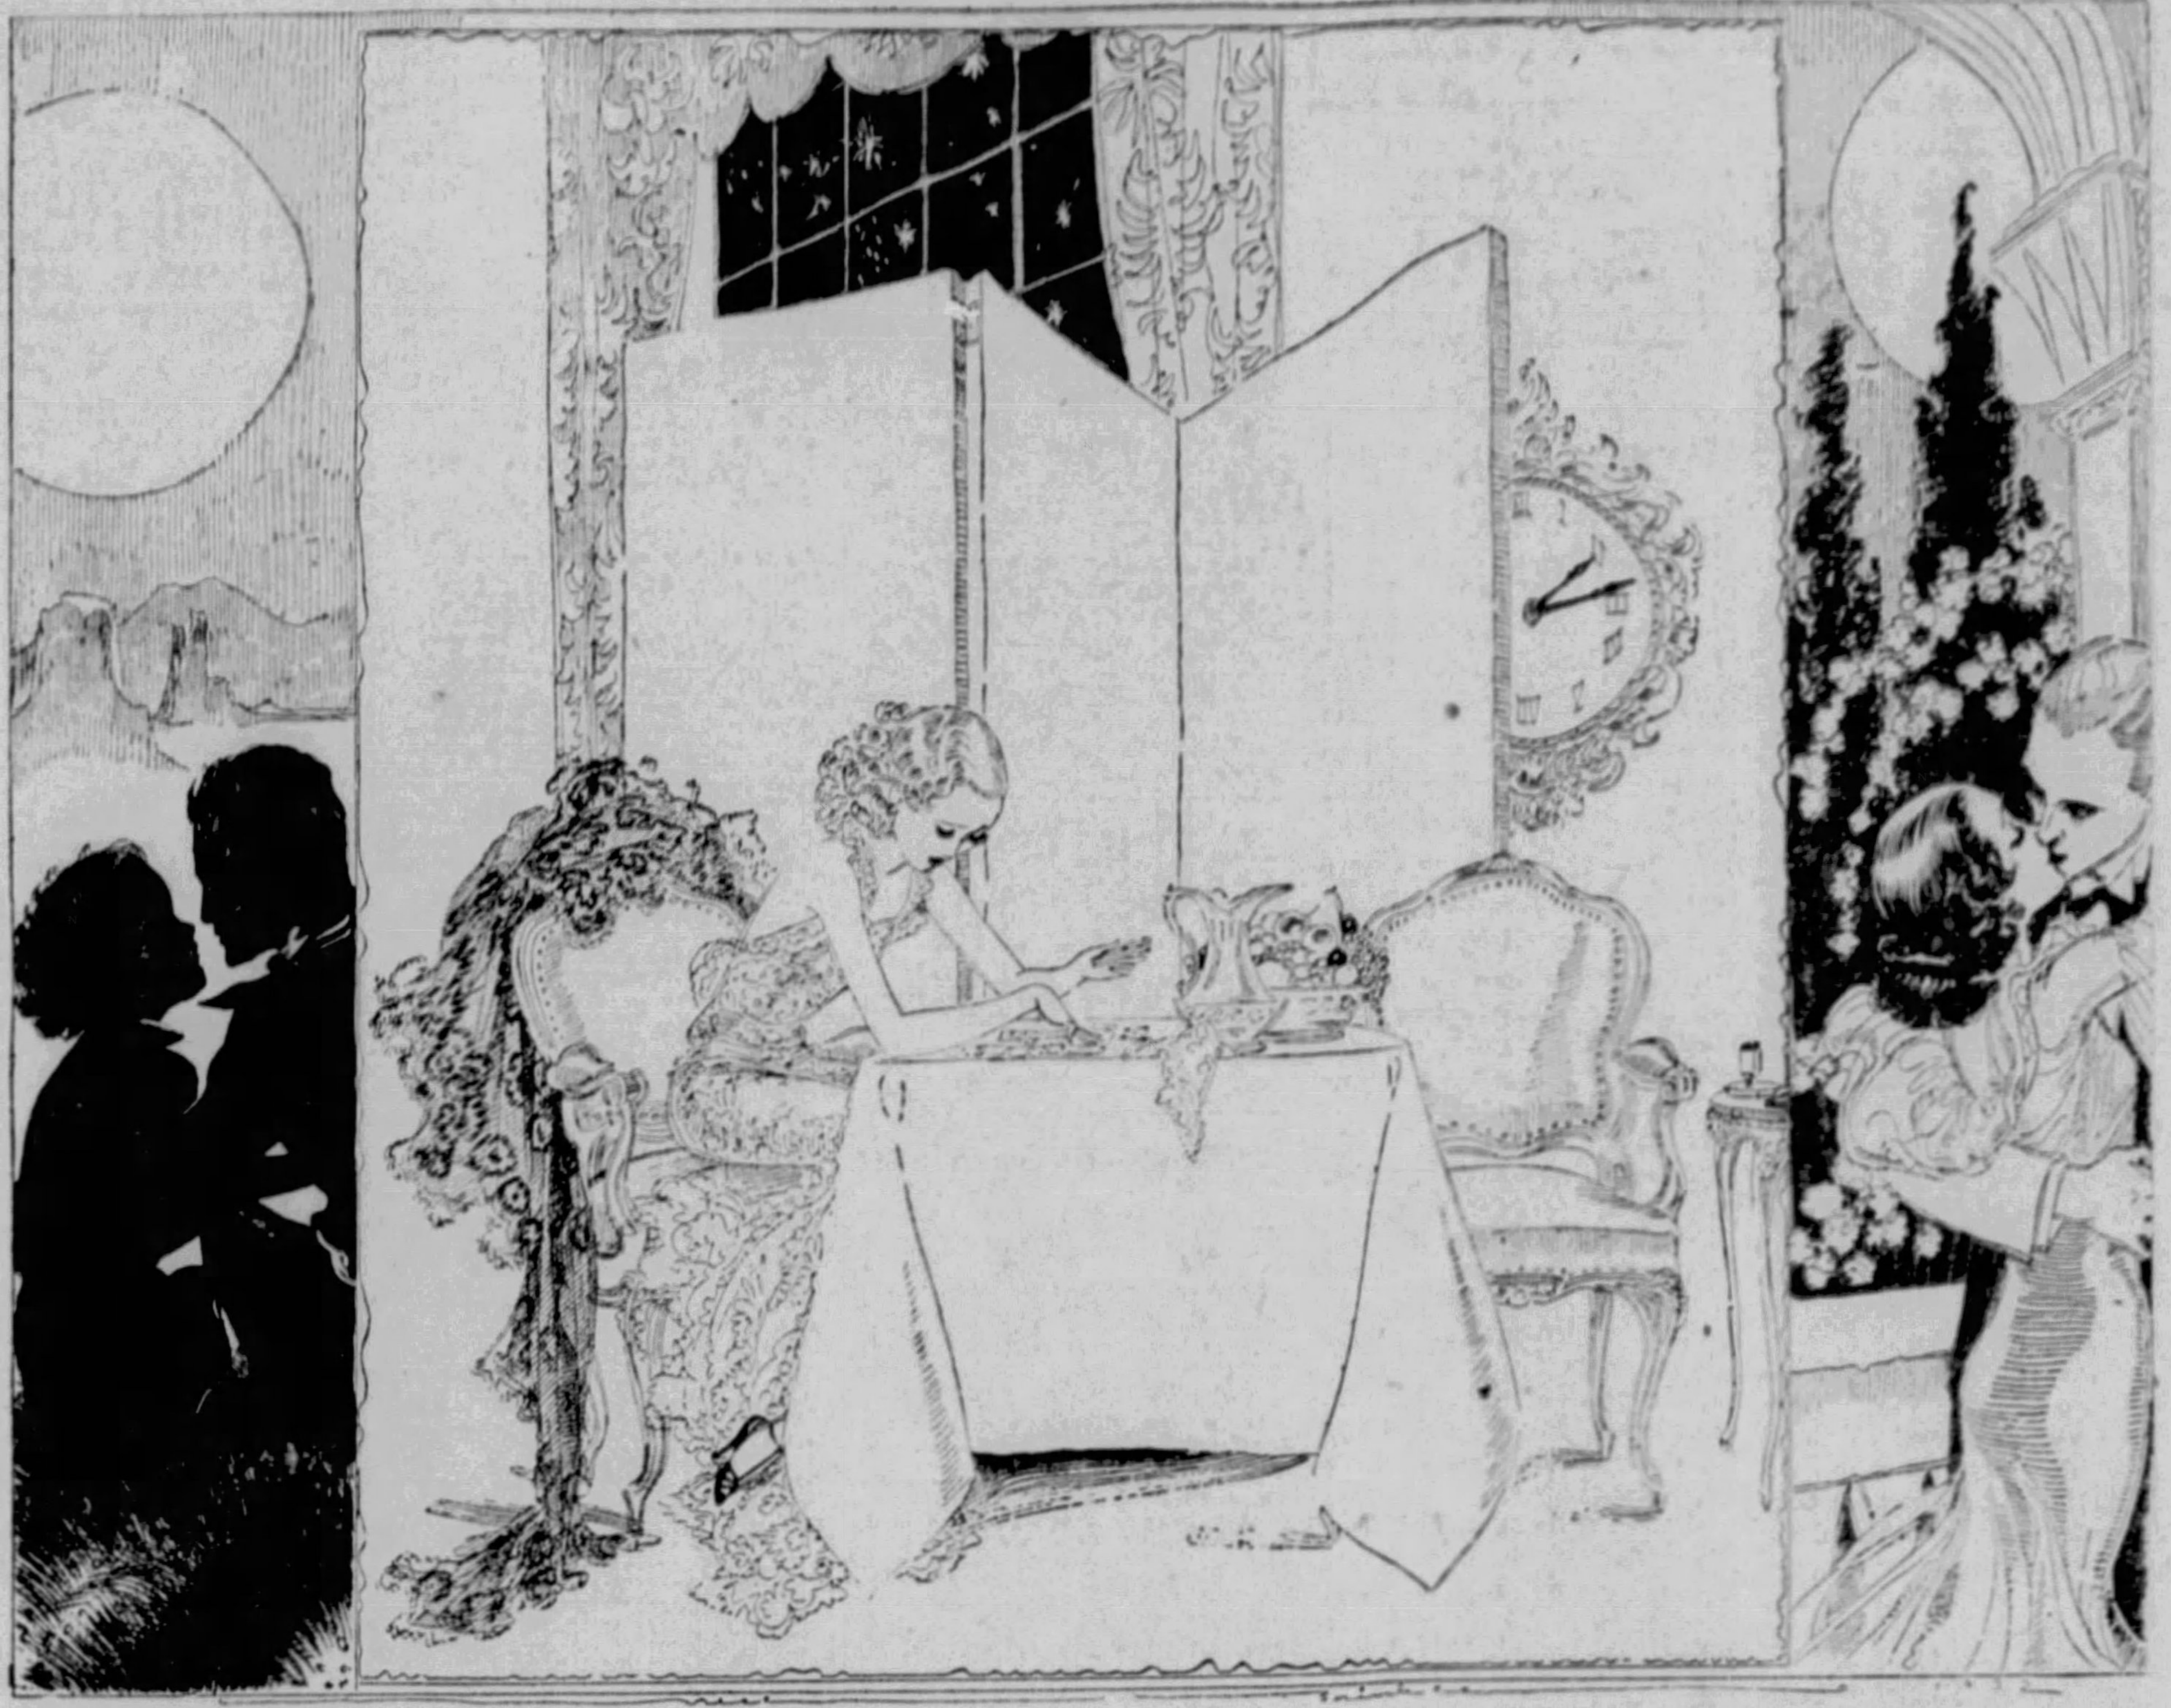
SOLITAIRE

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



There are a thousand ways of playing solitaire. A thousand ways of being alone. Byron said, "I love not solitude," because he was loathe to view the beautiful settings of the world alone. Some of us are happiest alone, more ourselves, more amused, more companioned. Others of us are more dual; we must have our alone times to be mentally and emotionally happy—and we must also have our best beloved along to see the splendid sights to see in the world, with the music to hear with, the laughs to laugh with—both of these, to be mentally and emotionally at rest.

The young creature alone at the table with a solemn, empty chair across from her is playing solitaire to its last meaning. And is too young to like it. Frothy with lace, her best perfume on eyebrow and ear, dressed and mooded for a husband who is off some other where, at the deep hour of two she is actually and really alone.

But there are others abroad, in moonlit places, alone and not alone. Playing solitaire for two. In the strange thin night-air of the desert, where romance blooms in the air of every season, and the stars hang like lanterns low in the pinons. On the fine old balcony of a Westchester house under a hazier moon than the Western one, the air heavy with rose and honeysuckle.

Alone, but not alone. Even in the buses on the avenue in the clamor of the mob, solitaire is played. For it's "solitude" to be alone. And two can be that anywhere.—NELL BRINKLEY.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

Madge Finds That Ronald Is Playing His Part Well

At her husband's admonition to listen to me because she would feel better after I got through talking, Lillian turned her suddenly haggard face toward me, and I made hasty answer to the anxious queries she had put.

"I'm sure Ronald not only can, but will keep it up," I told her. "His pride has been terribly hurt—"

"Marion probably ran him ragged on that trip down," Dicky said sapiently.

Remembering that Lillian had planned that tete-a-tete trip in a desperate effort to counteract Charles Owen's dreadful influence over her idolized young daughter, I ignored Dicky's speech instead of voicing my mental agreement with it, and hurried on.

"I think he already had planned to avoid her.

"Oh, I know that lofty avoidance stunt." This was Dicky, the irrepressible, again. "That's simply food and drink to a starved feminine ego. You must have coached the lad well, Madge. He was there, most artistically there, as I believe I remarked before."

"You did, with frills," Harry Underwood told him emphatically. "Suppose you let your wife have a chance to speak her lines, or do you want to hug the spotlight all the time?"

My husband waved his hand loftily toward me.

"Proceed!" he said. "Who am I to——"

"Just so," Mr. Underwood commented.

"Ronald was exceedingly reluctant at first to do anything save get out of the picture entirely," I said, "but he finally promised to 'give Mary a rush,' as Mary herself would put it, but I asked him to be careful tonight because of Noel. Tomorrow, however, you ought to see the scheme in full flower, for Mary has almost too much enthusiasm for it. She figures that she owes Noel something on account of Avis Arlen, and she's perfectly willing to let him have payment in full."

PUNISHMENT FOR NOEL

"I'll say she owes him something," Dicky commented. "Any boob that would stand without hitching for over five minutes to listen to that Arlen moron's outpourings, ought to have more than Mary is likely to give him."

"I think you may trust Mary," I said dryly, and Harry Underwood guffawed his approval.

"I'm in full agreement with you on that proposition," he told me. "But come along, folks! It's all right to leave the table, because of stern duty, but it's the quintessence of folly to stay away from a shore dinner like that one downstairs, once the duty's fulfilled."

"Spoken like a true trencherman," Dicky approved. "So long, Dad. We'll be on hand when it's time to go."

My father, with an affectionate arm around my shoulders, smiled indulgently, and dismissed us. But I wondered if he guessed, as I did, that Dicky's nonsense and apparent exuberance were but a mask to conceal the vindictive jealousy of Hugh Grantland that he almost had betrayed a few minutes before.

We went back to the dinner table to find it deserted, the young people having finished and, as usual, turned the living room into a dance hall. With the remembrance of the wounded Chinese across the hall, they had closed the doors into the hall and softened the music until no sound of their merriment penetrated beyond the room. I gave directions to Katie, patently worried over keeping our food warm, and with the rest went into the living room until she should summon us back to the table.

"The scheme's working," Harry Underwood spoke softly close to my ear. "Pipe my young daughter's activity."

MARION HURT

In his voice was the loving pride that is always his when referring to his stepdaughter. There was amusement also, but I shared neither feeling, although I could not censure Marion for the "rush"—in their own parlance—she was giving Bill. Hurt and bewildered by Ronald's defection, and with Carolyn's amused, slightly malicious, though undeniably affectionate eyes upon her, she was seizing the only chance she had to escape being a "wet smack," or whatever atrocious substitute modern youthful vocabulary has for the "wallflower" of a generation ago.

When she had first noticed Ronald's defection, I had seen the unconscious predatory glance she had sent around the table in search of retaliatory ammunition. But at that time Bill and Hank were at the other end of the table, so separated from her by the older people, that without giving her object away she could not talk to them across the others. And Bob Trevelian was so occupied with Carolyn that he did not know any other girl was on earth.

But in this impromptu dancing party with five boys and three girls—for, as far as dancing partners were concerned, Bill and Hank were as valuable as the three older boys—she was coming into her own again. When we came into the room she was dancing with Bill, the boy's face radiant because of the special attention she evidently had been paying him. Hank had snatched at an opportunity to "cut in" on Bob Trevelian, and was blissfully cavorting with Carolyn. But my eyes rested, a bit fearfully, upon Noel, who, with Bob beside him, was watching Mary float around in Ronald's arms. The curtain was up for our little comedy, destined to bring Marion to her senses. But how much did Noel understand of his role?

In the Camper's Equipment

If you do a great deal of picknicking or camping you will find a gayly colored oilcloth cover rolled on a stick is a valuable addition to the outfit. Then, no matter where you decide to stop for a meal, the oilcloth can be thrown over any sort of makeshift table and you have a feeling of cleanliness.

Hints for the Household

To prevent old potatoes from becoming discolored when they are boiled, add a slice of lemon to the water.

If bottles, jelly tumblers and jars are washed thoroughly, dried and aired before putting them away for preserving time you will find a big part of your work done before you start. Then they need only have a boiling hot water bath and they are ready.

Ammonia mixed with a little whiting is excellent for cleaning copper. Apply with a pad of soft cloth, and polish with a piece of chamois.

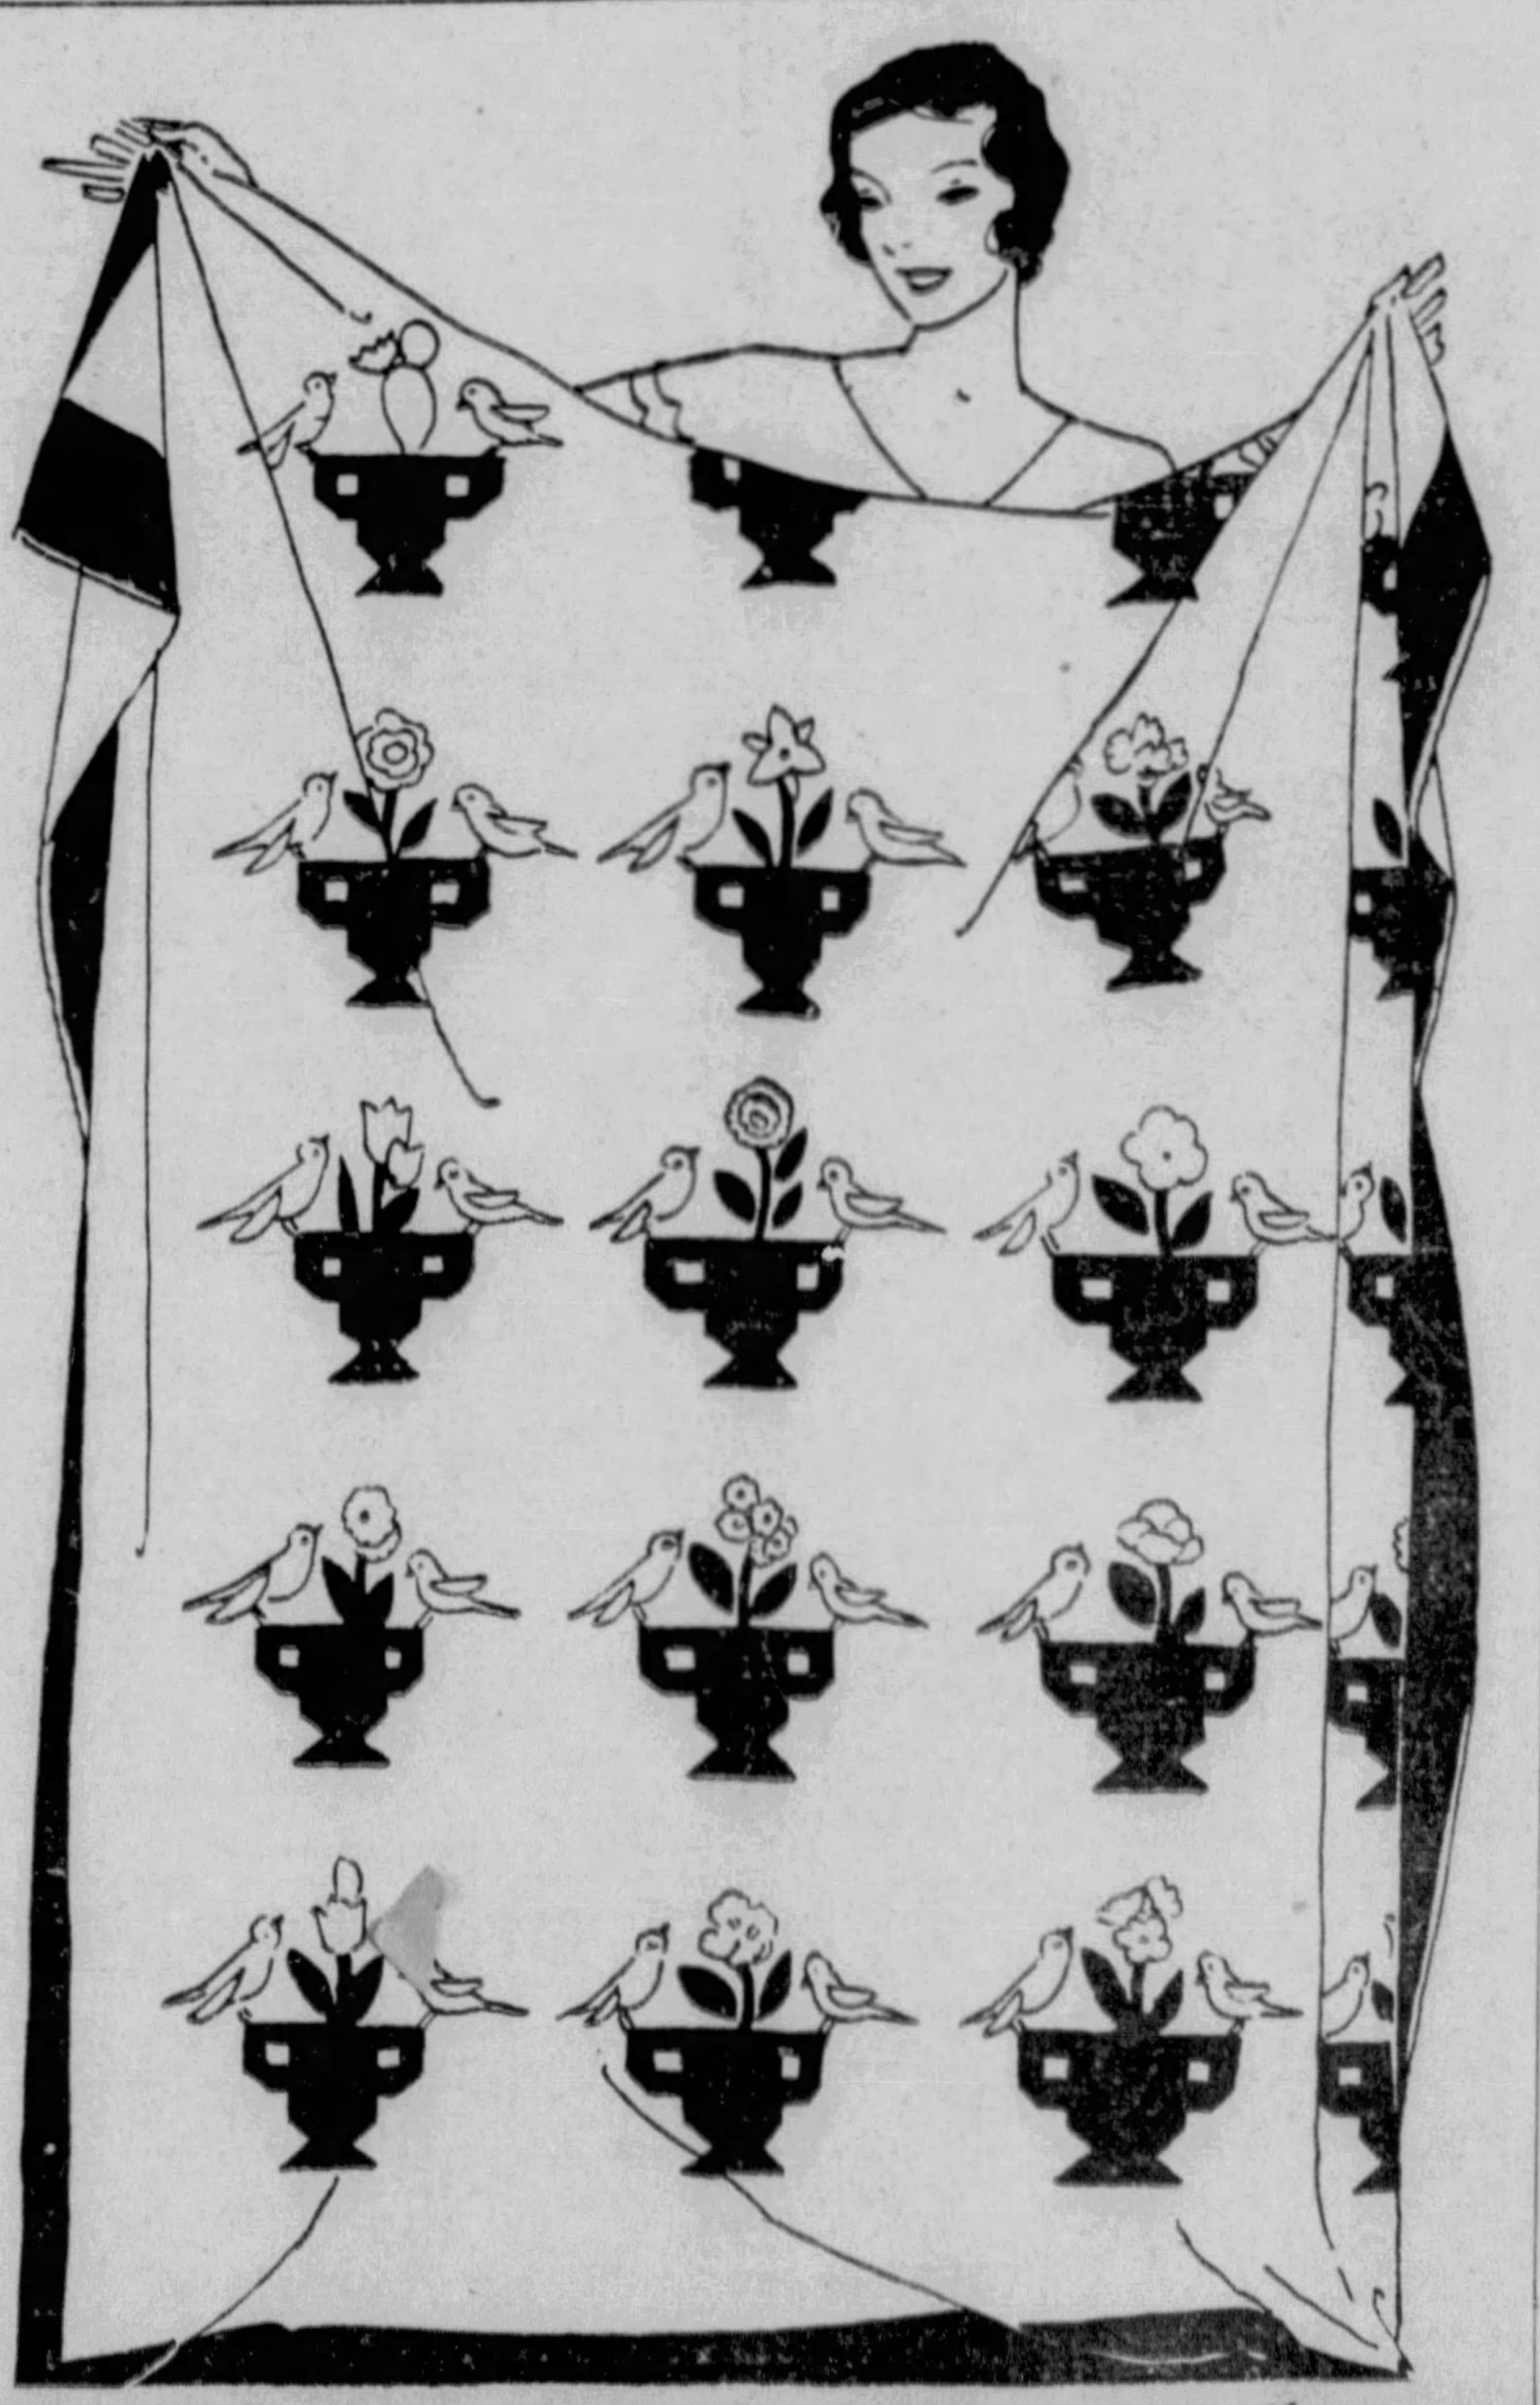
When traveling with a baby or small child it is well to pack all of his clothes and accessories in one place in the trunk or grip. Then a wild search for some small article is avoided when we arrive at our destination.

Cane chairs should be scrubbed clean and then wiped with a cloth wrung out in rice water. This forms a protective film over the cane and gives it a bright and glossy appearance.

The addition of a little flaked rice is an improvement to scrambled eggs, giving them additional solidity, and, of course, making them go farther. Allow a teaspoonful of the rice to each egg.

Nancy Page Quilt Club -:- -:-

By Florence La Ganke



Beginning of Garden Bouquet Quilt

A DIRECTION LEAFLET that will aid in making the Garden Bouquet Quilt will be sent free to any reader sending a stamped addressed envelope to Nancy Page in care of this paper.

The Nancy Page Quilt Club members were so anxious to see what kind of a quilt Nancy had designed for them that they came to her house almost an hour early.

"Please, Nancy, show it to us!" "Please, Nancy, tell us what it's like." "Oh, have a heart, Nance; don't make us wait any longer." But Nancy was adamant. As the clock struck 2 she opened the meeting.

"The quilt I have designed this time ought to please those of you who like flowers. It ought to please the garden lovers. I think it will please those who enjoy birds. I hope it will please all of you who like to sew and to make the kind of applique that grandmother did. This quilt which I will now show you is called—" of course you may make this quilt in outline stitch or with colored crayons—but, as she unrolled the quilt there were so many exclamations of delight that she had no chance to give its name.

"Oh, look at that quaint urn in which the flowers are put. My grandmother had one just like that." "Will you see that cunning bird?" "Won't it be fun to have a quilt with birds and flowers?" "Oh, I want to start right away. I can see the very bed in my house that is going to have a quilt like that."

When the voices died down, Nancy continued: "I am calling this new quilt 'Garden Bouquet.' By the time we have finished we will have a collection of flowers that would please any gardener and would call the birds from far and near. In fact, as you can see, they have already gathered and are standing, paired and filled with admiration on the edge of each urn. Some birds choose the wild rose, others the tulip or pansy. But each urn has its flowers and its birds, making—when gathered together—a delightful garden bouquet. Let's look at the pattern closely. Next week we will make the urn and then a tulip block and after that the birds." The members chattered and admired so long that Nancy had to bring them almost by force into the dining room, where she served jasmine tea and bird-shaped cookies.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Bronchiectasis

Chronic bronchitis is common, and too often neglected. In many cases the true nature of the trouble may be overlooked. Today I want to tell you about a condition called "bronchiectasis," which is often confused with bronchitis.

Dr. Copeland

Bronchiectasis is a stretching of the bronchial tube, and it is more common than is suspected. It follows any injury to the lining of the bronchial tubes and, because of the persistent cough and profuse secretion which accompanies it, is often mistaken for chronic bronchitis.

The cough in bronchiectasis is spoken of as chronic and productive cough. The afflicted person brings up large amounts of thick sputum, often having a disagreeable odor and occasinaally containing blood. The cough is spasmodic. Pain is rarely present, but the afflicted individual complains of shortness of breath.

While an X-ray examination readily reveals the stretched condition of the bronchial tubes, it is often difficult to make a diagnosis of this disease without the X-ray picture.

Bronchiectasis may be found in children, or in adults at any age, but it most frequently occurs between the ages of 30 and 40. It usually follows repeated colds or persistent under-nourishment, and sometimes appears after one of the acute diseases of childhood.

Occupation plays a role in this disease. Continued exposure to irritating dust or chemical vapor, producing a chronic irritation and inflammation of the lining of the bronchial tubes, may result in bronchiectasis. Persistent and neglected cases of bronchitis also may lead to bronchiectasis.

The disease can be successfully treated only when recognized in its early stages. Predisposing causes such as focal infections, chronic colds, faulty diet and unhygienic surroundings, must be corrected before any success in treatment can be expected. Change of climate is beneficial in most cases.

Some persons are born with a tendency toward this disease, which then is spoken of as "congenital bronchiectasis." In these cases extreme care and attention must be given to building up and developing the body. Plenty of fresh air, sunlight and nourishing foods and prevention of nose and throat infections are necessary for the welfare of such individuals.

CRASH ON FENCE ENDS PURSUIT

William D. Raboch, 29, of 3241 Bainton street, was at liberty on $2,500 bond today pending a hearing before Alderman Ray Schneider as a sequel to an automobile chase that began in West View and ended when his car crashed into the iron fence of St. Peter's Catholic Church, Sherman avenue and West Ohio street, late yesterday.

State Highway Patrolmen H. E. Moorhouse and G. H. McLaughlin reported that after Robach had driven recklessly through West View, without a front tire, they gave chase, firing at the car as it sped down Perrysville avenue.

In the pursuit the speeding car sideswiped several others and forced a truck against a street car. Raboch was said by police to have been drinking.

Held in Shooting Of McKeesport Man

Harry Fleck, 23, of Lincoln way, Versailles, was held today by county detectives for questioning in connection with the shooting of Roy Mellinger, 20, of McKeesport, who told police he was shot in the face as he returned home from a dance. He was taken to McKeesport Hospital, where physicians say he will lose sight of his left eye. Detectives said the youths recently had quarreled.

Senator Reed Sails On European Trip

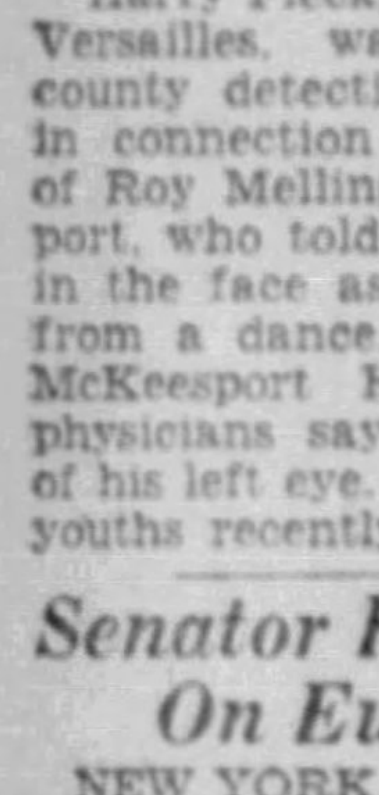
NEW YORK, July 30.—(INS.)—Senator David A. Reed, Pennsylvania, and Wollmar Bostrom, Swedish Minister to the United States, were among passengers booked to sail to Europe today.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 30.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Too bad this affair in Washington. Personally, I think the whole idea of this pilgrimage was ill advised, and no doubt did their cause harm, but they have their side of it too. They have the same right there as any other "lobbyist." They at least were not paid, they were doing it for themselves, which placed 'em right away about 90 per cent higher in public estimation than the thousands of "lobbyists" that are there all the time.



Will Rogers

But no matter how you feel about the whole thing, you have got to admire the fine way that big body of hungry men acted while they were there. They hold the record for being the best behaved of any fifteen thousand hungry men ever assembled anywhere in the world. They were hungry, and they were seein' our government wasting th[illegible] and millions before their eyes, and yet they remained fair and sensible.

Would 15 thousand hungry bankers have done it. 15 thousand farmers, 15 thousand [illegible]. And just think what 15 thousand club women would have done to Washington again if they were hungry. The Senate would have resigned and the [illegible] committed suicide. It's easy to be a gentleman when you are well fed. But these boys did it on an empty stomach. So we at least owe 'em a vote of thanks. And it was too bad their fine record was marred at the finish by somebody blundering.

Yours, WILL.

City Officials' Autos And Assistants' Taxis Help Boost Tax Rate

Scanning the list of expenditures permitted under the budget for city government this year, are two that may have been missed or misunderstood.

One is taxis. For this item, $10,000 is allowed.

Another is an automobile mechanic for the Mayor at a salary of $2,040 a year.

They're somehow related. And they have a definite relation to the high cost of government.

The one item, the pay of the Mayor's mechanic, is small. There is a city garage, which is large. Its appropriation was cut, but it still has $104,000 for operating, of which $41,000 is wages for machinists, mechanics and other employes.

Perhaps the Mayor's car could be repaired there.

A chauffeur for the Mayor also is on the payroll for $2,040. Most chauffeurs for private employers qualify as repairmen, too. It's a small item, but the bulk of the items that make city taxation a cross on the taxpayers' back is built of these small items.

A bigger one, however, is the taxi problem. The history of it is, briefly, this:

Mayor W. A. Magee in 1923 looked at the city garage bill, the cost for gasoline and other supplies, and decided to eliminate the joy-riding of city employes.

City cars were taken from every one but the police. Taxis were allowed to those department heads who occasionally had to go on a tour of inspection. Cars and chauffeurs were not provided then to take officials to and from their homes, to and from political meetings.

The bill in 1923 for taxis was $20,000, and in 1925 a little more than $22,000. Mayor Magee himself had no car, no chauffeur. Neither had his department heads. The cost of keeping city cars—which Council decided to investigate last fall and then suddenly changed their minds—was nil. There were only a few police cars.

ELIMINATE WASTE IN GOVERNMENT

No sooner did Mayor Kline assume office than the private car and chauffeur come back, first for the Mayor, then for department heads, then for others.

For the most part, only the draftsmen and the lesser officials use taxi slips now. And, it is reported, some get taxi slips, use the street cars and ride the taxis for dates.

• The taxi fund has had for these years during the Kline administration, no relation to economy. But it might easily be called government waste and extravagance.

Some of the so-called "first families" who had costly cars last year are riding the street cars now. They and the other taxpayers say they can't afford to maintain so many city officials riding on balloon tires.

(Further discussion of waste in Monday's Sun-Telegraph.)

PRIZE WINNER TO TAKE TRIP

How it feels to win $500, and how to spend it, was the topic of conversation today at the Tuberculosis Hospital.

Mrs. Edith S. Watkins, a nurse at the hospital, learned recently that she was the winner of one of the five $500 prizes, awarded in the Blue Ribbon Malt Contest, featured over the Columbia Broadcasting system by the old maestro, Ben Bernie.

Mrs. Watkins solved the queries of the curious, with:

PUSH MASCHKE GRAFT QUIZ

CLEVELAND, July 30.—(INS.)—Named in indictments that shocked the city with the force of a bombshell, Maurice Maschke, former Republican national committeeman, and six others, most of them his political colleagues, were to be arraigned today on charges concerned with the deficit of $570,382 in the county treasury.

The seven men were cited in a partial report of the grand jury after a week's investigation into the treasury shortage disclosed by state examiners. The probe will be continued, it was announced, with the prospect of additional indictments.

Maschke was charged with aiding and abetting embezzlement of $140,000 and grand larceny of the same amount.

Munhall Garage Owner Ends Life

Alex Pearlman, 32, proprietor of Alex's garage, Munhall, was found dead today with a bullet wound in his heart. A letter nearby gave directions for his burial.

He failed to return to the home of his sister last night and a relative was sent to look for him today when he did not open the garage. In a room above the garage at 416 East Eighth avenue, Munhall, the body was found.

September 7—Last day to be assessed for payment of poll taxes, a tax receipt being necessary to register.

September 8—First registration day in second and third-class cities, including Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Duquesne and Clairton.

September 20—Second registration day.

October 8—Third and last registration day, also last day to pay poll taxes.

September 6 and 7—Register assessors will sit at polling places in boroughs and townships to list those who may have been omitted in house-to-house canvass.

2 MORE BODIES TESTED IN PLOT

Analysis of two more bodies exhumed in the investigation of the alleged Munhall poison plot to collect insurance, was begun today by F. C. Buckmaster, county chemist. The result of the autopsies was withheld by the Coroner's office last night.

The bodies exhumed are those of Richard Buyva, an infant, cared for by Mrs. Mary Chalfa and Joseph Mantyo, first husband of Mrs. Anna Allas. The two women were named in the alleged statement of Mrs. Gizella Young. The child died in 1930, presumably from natural causes. Mantyo's death in 1928, was attributed to a fractured skull suffered in a fall down a flight of steps.

Mrs. Allas was the stepmother of Stephen and Andrew Allas, named as victims of the alleged poison plot, whose bodies were exhumed. Coroner W. J. McGregor refused to divulge the nature of Buckmaster's report of the examination of the vital organs of Stephen.

We All Can't be Satisfied It Isn't Human Nature

This reminds us of the fact that lots of folks are not satisfied with their present living quarters. Some want to move into new houses, some want to move into a different apartment, and still others want to eat somebody else's cooking for awhile. While these folks are thinking about moving others are thinking of buying or selling something, trading this or that and lots of other wants too numerous to mention.

How can you reach these people? There is only one answer Through the classified columns of The Sun-Telegraph, which takes your message into more homes than any other daily paper published in Pittsburgh.

Call Grant 5400 and ask for an ad taker. These young ladies, trained in the art of writing result-producing copy, will assist you in the preparation of your ad.

BLONDIE OF THE FOLLIES

From Which M. G. M. Has Made A Motion Picture Starring Marion Davies

By FRANCES MARION

CHAPTER VI.

Many months had passed since Blondie last saw Lottie, and this meeting had come so unexpectedly. Standing there in the center of the living room, Blondie blinked hard several times. Could this beautifully gowned woman be her old tenement pal? And then Lottie, ignoring Pete's wisecrack, the sullen look from Pa McClune, and the envious eyes of Gert and Ma McClune, spoke rather loftily to her old friend.

"Well, Blondie, what about you, my dear?"

That broke the spell. It really was Lottie!

"What about YOU?" Blondie retorted and very sincerely added. "You look swell, Mug."

"Mug?—Ho! Ho!—It seems years, doesn't it?" Lottie tried her best to keep her poise. Gert helped some by picking up the new baby.

"See the new addition. And his name's Horace," said Gert, shoving the none too clean and homely youngster right at Lottie.

"Pretty—" Lottie started the usual praises, but Gert picked up the end of her fur.

"Is that real silver fox?" asked Gert. Blondie seized the opportunity, reaching for the other end of the neckpiece.

"Yes—it is, isn't it?"—to Lottie. Mrs. Callahan proudly answered the question.

"Of course it is."

There were admiring "Oh's" and "Ah's" from the women, while Pa moved around filling his pipe for the want of something better to do. Pete never stopped eating.

BLONDIE IMPRESSED

It was Mrs. Callahan's opportunity again, and she took advantage of it, suddenly lifting up Lottie's skirt.

"Want to see something grand?" and the proud mother reached for the garment underneath. "Lace!—Real, old lace!" she bragged, much to Lottie's embarrassment.

"You can't wash it," Mrs. Callahan continued, "it's gotta be dry cleaned. Shame to hide it under your skirt—"

Blondie ended the fashion show by pulling Lottie over to the window.

"Have those shoes made for you?" asked Blondie.

"No. I found a darling little shop, just off Madison—such a quaint Frenchman—he imports!" Lottie was talking affably to Blondie now.

"Oh, yeah!" Blondie was quite sincerely taken with the idea.

"Follies pay you a lot, don't they?" sarcastically from Gert who could hold back no longer.

"Well, now——," Lottie started to answer when Pete cut in.

"Why shouldn't a lady have a side line?"

There was a dead, awkward silence. Pete laughed, almost self-consciously, and Blondie spoke up:

"What was that crack meant for?"

Gert, the baby on her hip, turned to Blondie: "You heard ——," she started. Then, Pete, realizing that this was going too far for his own comfort, interrupted:

"Ain't I right Lottie?" There was a dreadful, heavy silence.

NEW NAME

"Well, I thought you'd like to see Lottie again," Mrs. Callahan said, a catch in her voice. Pa looked at Blondie, whose sympathies were fast going to Lottie. Then he said, trying to be friendly:

"It's nice to see you again, Lottie."

"Lottie—that name sounds so strange," protested the Follies queen. "Lottie! Dear, dear!"

"Her name is Lurline now," said Mrs. Callahan quickly. "Lurline Cavendish."

"Oh, you've changed your name," said Pa. "You're married?"

"No!" Lurline looked straight at him.

"That's what the police call an alias," chirped up Pete.

"No," said Ma McClune. "It's a non-de-plummie—ain't it, pa? Isn't that what they call it?" Pa had always been considered the scholar of the family, and he quickly assumed that attitude now as he said:

"Yes—there are many things to call it."

"What are you all talking about?" said Lurline, vexed and eager to get away. It was quite evident that she wasn't appreciated by the McClune family.

"I guess you've gotta go, haven't you? Blondie said, trying to relieve the situation.

GLAD TO GET AWAY

Lottie jumped at the opportunity. "Indeed I have. I'm late already—and a couple of ambassadors and other gentlemen are coming for cocktails. She fluttered a real lace handkerchief under her nose, a nose that could no longer endure the odor of cornbeef and cabbage.

"My what elegant perfume," said Ma, who came in quickly from the kitchen. "I can smell it even out here."

"Yeh—I got a load of that," declared Pete, as he sniffed several times very noticeably. "It makes you go goose-flesh. What do they call it?"

"It's an assence mixed specially for me," and Lurline shook her handkerchief toward Blondie, saying: "Refreshing, isn't it.

"What a swell smell," said Blondie, taking a deep breath.

"It's called Un Nuit d'Amour, which means, my dear," but Blondie interrupted her.

"Come on," she mentioned to Lurline, eager to get away from her father's cold, searching eyes.

"Yes—well, goodbye!" and Lurline waved jauntily.

They moved toward the door to a chorus of "goodbyes" and "so longs" from the family. Mrs. Callahan was smiling: "Lottie is sending me some sherry a friend gave her. I'll bring some down . . ."

"Yes, do, mother," Lurline interrupted. "They'll adore it—old Madeira," and she hurried to join Blondie.

"We have no use for it—thanks all the same," said Pa, coldly.

FATHER DISAPPROVES

"You should be might, proud of Lottie," Mrs. Callahan," Ma said hastily.

"I am," Mrs. Callahan answered as she followed the girls out.

"Proud, ugh!" grunted Pa as he resumed his seat at the dining table. The others took their places, when Pa suddenly reached over to Ma and picked up a sprig of forget-me-not.

"Lottie gave 'em to her mother. I'll keep 'em for a souvenir," said Ma, who was easily impressed.

"We don't want those flowers!" And Pa threw them into the waste paper basket. "We don't want anything in this house that came from that source." And then, as he sank into a chair, he said rather fervently, "Thank God, our Blondie is still a good little girl. That's more to me than all the riches in the world."

In the hallway Lurline turned to her mother "Goodbye, mother—don't come down," and she kissed her affectionately.

"Goodbye. Lot—er—er—Lurline. Come again soon, now," and Mrs. Callahan started up the stairs to her flat.

"Got your own car?" said Blondie.

"Of course, child—but I have only one of them with me. Come down and see it. Today I was in a mood for the Rolls." Lurline was very friendly now as the two girls started down toward the tenement entrance.

"Mug—do you remember when you went?"

"Yes—you were afraid—now do you see?"

"Yes"—said Blondie, faintly. "I see."

"How wrong you were." When Blondie didn't answer: "Oh, this is a dreadful place, my dear. I'd die if I ever had to endure it again! Don't you ever want to get out of this environment?"

"Yes, Lottie, I do," Blondie almost whispered her confession.

As they reached the entrance, Lottie gave one glance at her Rolls Royce limousine and uttered a cry of horror!

Synopsis

Blondie McClune and Lottie Callahan, friends since childhood, work in the same store. After work one evening, Lottie says she has a date and asks Blondie to join her. Blondie disapproves. Two men wait for them outside the building. When one becomes too familiar with her, Blondie slaps his face and goes home alone, to the poor section of the city. Later the two girls argue about the date and it ends in a rough and tumble fight. Blondie's dress is torn and she decides to get a new one. Looking for some money she had saved, she discovers that somebody has taken it. She greets her ailing dad when he arrives home and learns that he has lost his job. Lottie leaves home in quest of a career. After a few months, under the name of Lurline Cavendish, she becomes the newest sensation of the Follies. She visits the McClunes.

Now Go On

Blondie admired the fur Lottie was wearing. (Marion Davies, as Blondie; Billie Dove, as Lottie, and Louise Carter, as Lottie's mother.)

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Today, every member who attended the meeting of the Cameraphone Chapter, of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club received a great big multi-colored ice cream cone. And were they good? Manager Earl Roeser noticed one little fellow that was following him around the theater and he asked him what he wanted.

"Listen, Mr. Roeser," the youngster said, "if there's any ice cream left over, can I have the overs."

This youngster was out of luck because just as the meeting was called to order and the last member had entered the door the ice cream ran out.

PIE-EATING CONTEST

A novel pie-eating contest was staged today at the Cameraphone—berry pie ala-mode was the order of the day. Small individual pies topped with a big dipper of ice cream were given to each boy who entered this contest and the one who finished first was acclaimed winner.

Adele Yorio, Mercedes Brinker and Henry La Pertche entertained the youngsters with songs and dances and the meeting was closed with all the children singing some of the popular songs of the day.

A pet show was announced for the meeting next week. Every member who owns a pet was requested to bring it to next week's meeting and those having the best pets will be awarded prizes.

Miss Helen Fisher accompanied these youngsters at the piano.

Dances were presented by Frank Rungo, Harold Wolfe, Alvin Bales and Jean Scherbald, Mary Jane Woods, Stanley Wolfe, Betty Ihrig and Billy Brownlee.

If you are not a member of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, send your name and address, name of your parents, date and year of your birth, school you attend and a membership card and button will be mailed to you.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

None likes a bossy life mate.

This is particularly annoying as a trait displayed before others.

There may be no temper outbursts in the home when one or the other assumes the position of ruler, but there is quite likely to be some fireworks if such a manner is demonstrated in public.

At a recent card party a husband objected to a certain lead made by his wife.

She believed it to be quite proper—he insisted it was not the thing to do.

The heated discussion was avoided by this remark from the wife:

"This is not the time nor the place to go into the matter; we will discuss it after we reach home."

That ended the dispute.

If more married couples should adopt this plan it might be more agreeable for the other guests and there would be fewer exhibitions of temper in public.

Indeed, why isn't it a good plan?

People don't attend card parties to hear quarreling.

It is supposed to be an occasion of pleasure—every one on good behavior.

After all, a card game isn't of enough importance to cause family quarrels.

The End of the Volpes

Pittsburgh Gets Another Taste of Gangsters' Methods
Brief Comments on Local News.

In the dramatic killing of the three Volpe brothers yesterday Pittsburgh got another taste of gangsters' methods and of their contempt for law and order. The Volpes had followed a career that exposed them to just such a fate as they met. Their record was not a pleasant one and they had enormously increased their capacity for evil by engaging in politics. Prohibition gave them their opportunity.

The Volpes would never have gained the power they exercised at the peak of their career if it had not been for the aid they received from police and politicians who benefited by the Volpes' control of the polls in a number of populous districts. The first requisite for good municipal government is that partnerships between political leaders and gang leaders shall be severed.

A number of the policemen and firemen who were recently discharged by the Kline administration, supposedly for political reasons, have withdrawn their appeals to the Civil Service Commission. It is reported that they have been restored to the payroll or otherwise "taken care of." Their protest, then, with its threat of an exposure of the nullification of the civil service law, has been effective.

Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay proposed to show, on behalf of the discharged policemen, that while the civil service law prescribes that, in reducing the force, the least meritorious officers shall be dismissed, men with good records were let out while others with criminal records were retained. It is to be hoped Lindsay will enlighten the public further in regard to this.

The Legislature, as Gov. Pinchot points out in a letter to the electorate, has as yet passed no measure for the relief of the unemployed. The session has been far from futile, however. Some good measures have been adopted, and there is encouragement for the belief that the unemployed, too, will receive benefits before the lawmakers adjourn sine die.

Both houses have passed the bill giving broad powers of taxation to the Pittsburgh and Philadelphia city councils, and Gov. Pinchot has promised to approve the legislation. Exercised with moderation and prudence, the new authority can be made to relieve home owners and office building owners and store owners of part of the oppressive real estate tax. The whole community will benefit.

The Legislature has paved the way, also, for restoration of the amounts lopped off of the state's appropriations for hospitals and certain other institutions. The special session would have served a useful purpose if it had done little else than this, for the need of the hospitals is urgent and the curtailing of the commonwealth's donations threatened the very existence of some of them.

While the relief of the unemployed remains as the chief work yet to be done by the General Assembly, the investigation by the Senate of the charges that Chairman W. D. B. Ainey, of the Public Service Commission, accepted money gifts from public utilities officials is of no less importance. A thorough sifting of this business may conceivably result in charges in the commission which will bring the people relief from utlity rates.

Pittsburghers had a fresh reminder this week of the unfairness of some of the practices of the Duquesne Light Company in the exposure of the fact that the company was allowing small home owners to pay under rate schedule "C" without informing them that they could get the same service at a lower rate under schedule "B." The public's reaction to the exposure shows appreciation of an opportunity to save even a small sum of money monthly.

The city has a chance to save not merely a small sum but hundreds of thousands of dollars by stopping the waste to which the Sun-Telegraph is calling attention in a series of articles. It is illuminating to learn that a tax cut of a half mill could be effected by abrogation of the wasteful contract with the South Pittsburgh Water Company.

One of the distinguished figures in Pittsburgh's industrial history is John A. Roebling, inventor of wire rope and designer of the Brooklyn Bridge. One hundred years ago he founded Saxonburg, near Butler. The Sunday Sun-Telegraph will present in the Gravure Section tomorrow, in honor of the centennial, some interesting photographs of Roebling and Saxonburg.

Thoughtful persons will find food for cogitation in an article on "Benefits of the Depression" in the American Weekly, to be distributed as a supplement with tomorrow's issue of the Sun-Telegraph. There are many other good things of varied character in the Weekly, too. One of them is the remarkable story of Mary Elkins, a wealthy Indian girl.

The revival of quilting as a pastime for women is a wholesome thing that is bound to give much pleasure. The Sun-Telegraph, eager to help, inaugurates today, as a feature of the Saturday editions, the Nancy Page Club, presenting designs and instructions for making beautiful quilts. Needleworkers will find this Saturday feature useful.

Hearst Papers Advocate:

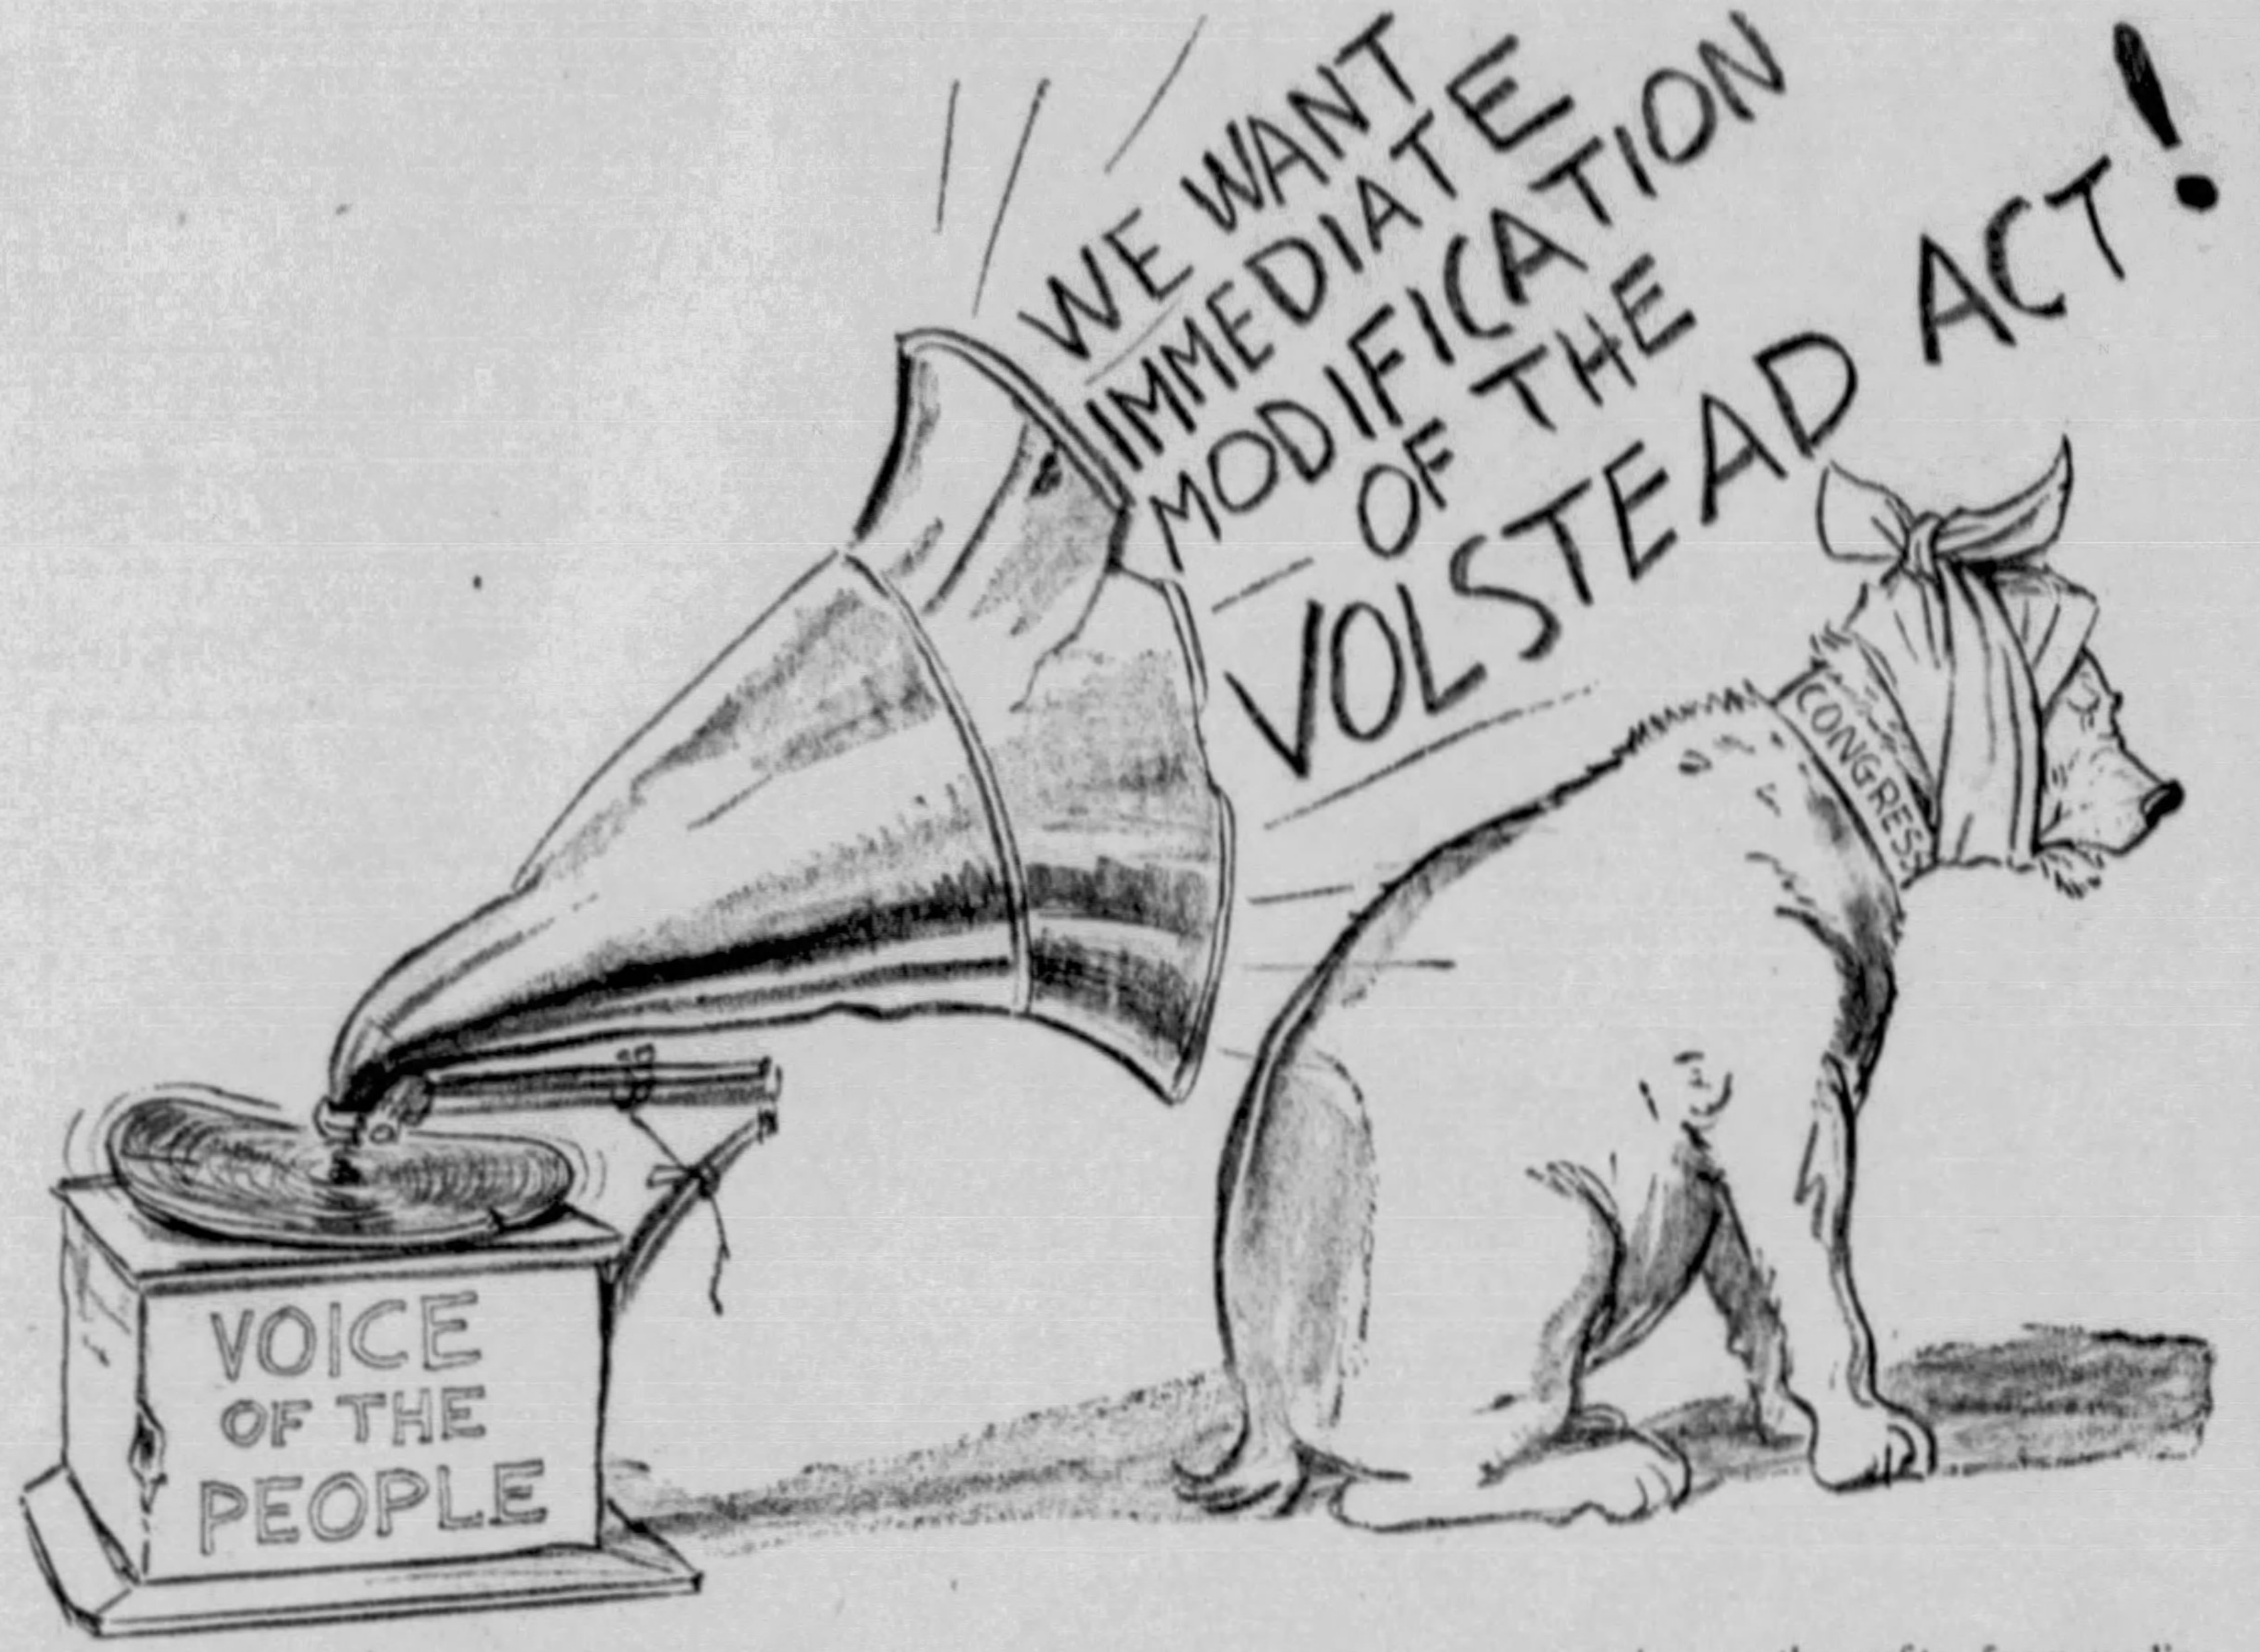
1.—The five billion dollar loan to relieve unemployment and put billions of dollars into immediate circulation.

2.—Adoption of 5 per cent sales tax and reduction in income taxes, releasing income to finance industry.

3.—Immediate modification of the Volstead Act, permitting light wines and beers, reviving industry and employment, providing government income, ending criminal racketeering and restoring American personal liberty.

His Master's Voice Unheeded!

(Copyright, 1932.)



WE WANT IMMEDIATE MODIFICATION OF THE VOLSTEAD ACT!
CONGRESS
VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

If Congress were at all responsive to public sentiment it would vote the IMMEDIATE MODIFICATION OF THE VOLSTEAD ACT to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and light wines and to provide therefrom a needed and proper revenue.

The country sorely needs the revenue. Tax oppressed citizens need a lightening of their burdens that such added revenue would give. The cause of Temperance, blighted by more than 12 years of foolish Prohibition, would be advanced. Underworld racketeers, grown prosperous and powerful under Prohibition, would find their coffers dwindling and their power waning, as the profits from evading the Eighteenth Amendment, grew less. And they would soon pass out of the national picture they so dominate today.

The American businessman, having come to realization of the economic farce of Prohibition, would welcome the change.

But picayune politicians still dominate the National Capital and until they are supplanted by lawmakers who will respect the wishes of the people, the nation can only bide its time UNTIL THE NEXT ELECTION and hope for the best.

Marry-Go-Round

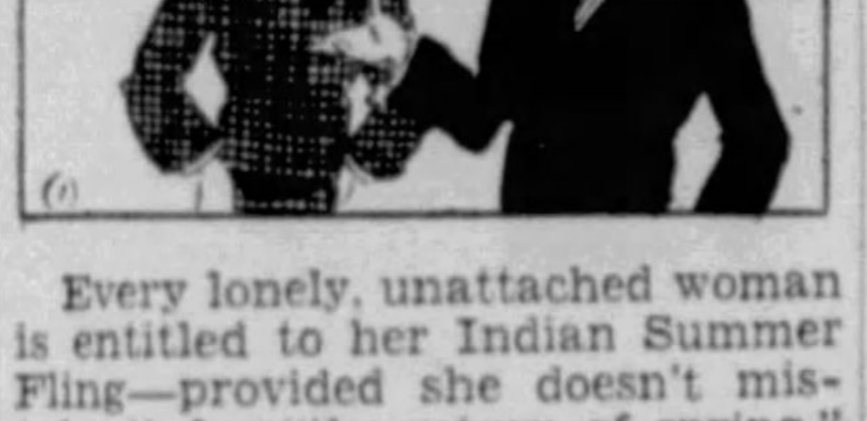
By HELEN ROWLAND

We Moderns

After a few years, it may be a strain on a man's mind to remember his wedding anniversary. But no matter how MANY wedding anniversaries a modern divorcee may have, she never forgets to drop a little flower of memory on each of them.

* * *

After a little summer dalliance, a man often goes back to his wife, just as a woman "goes back to mother"—for protection, relief and moral support.



YES SIR I'LL 'MAKE A WOMAN' OF HER!

Every lonely, unattached woman is entitled to her Indian Summer Fling—provided she doesn't mistake it for "the return of spring," and look around for a boy to play with.

* * *

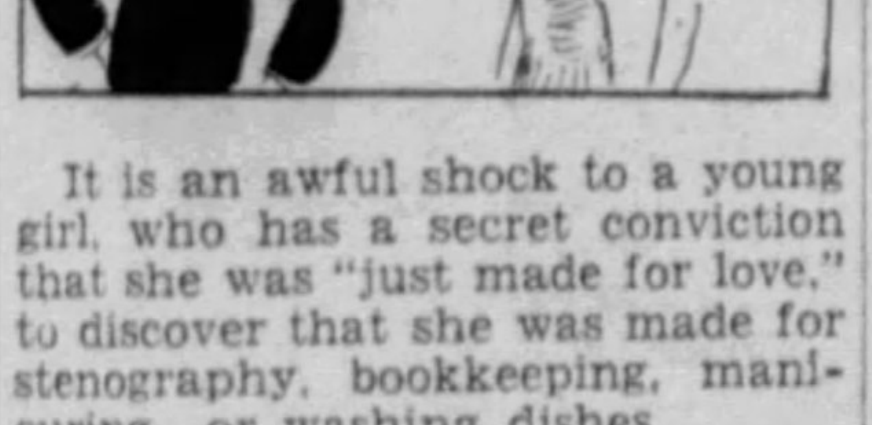
Isn't Prohibition wonderful! Men used to stand around a barroom and get tight, while they sang "There's No Place Like Home!" Now, they come home and get tight, because there's no barroom like a man's own home!

* * *

The secret hope of every fond father's heart these days is to hand his unmanageable daughter over to a pure, sweet young man who will break her wild ways and "make a woman" of her!

* * *

It took both hands and all her wits for the old-fashioned woman to hold onto her husband. But the modern wife has to be sufficiently ambidextrous to hold onto a job with one hand and keep a man in line with the other.



HOW DID YOU FAIL TO MARRY?

It is an awful shock to a young girl, who has a secret conviction that she was "just made for love," to discover that she was made for stenography, bookkeeping, manicuring—or washing dishes.

* * *

Before a man goes into a love affair, these practical days, the first thing he does is to make a mental note of all the emergency exits.

* * *

Women always wonder how an attractive man failed to marry: men always wonder how he succeeded in staying single.

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Isn't It So?

To some people, the police are just around the corner.

We cannot sow to the wind today without reaping the whirlwind tomorrow.

Another thing that is just around the corner is the interest on the mortgage.

A man can sprain his back quicker spading the garden than digging for fishworms.

The average motorist can make 60 miles an hour easier than he can make 12 payments on the car.

Some people think that playing the stock market is gambling, others declare it is just giving your money away.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Well, here I am on my annual spree at Coney. My wife sticks in the car, reading—cool and distant. She doesn't think an old fool, such as I, has any business looping-the-loop, shooting the chutes and bumping-the-bumps. She doesn't appreciate my Youth. My elan.

But I can take it! Nothing is too dare-devil for me when I feel full of the Old Ned. Yipee! Happy Fiscal Year! Bring on your excitement. See that swing for life over yonder. Watch me hop into that as soon as I finish a couple of rides on this roller coaster.

Here we go. Up! Maybe this will take me out of the red. Down we whiz. Around this break-neck curve with me leaning out careless like. And holding only with one hand. I'm on my own! The little lady in the seat ahead has the heebie-jeebies. I'll pat her shoulder. The dirty look I got.

Grr-rrupp! Now we come to a dead stop right on the highest peak. I hope nothing has happened. There are yells from down below. I must act calm. Women and children first. Still, there's only one woman in this car and she's mad at me. I'll turn the other cheek. Don't look now, but I think that is an ambulance coming.

If they send up a rope ladder, I'll let her climb down first. My life doesn't matter. I'm old and palsied. Look how my hands shake. Go right along, Madam. You probably have dear ones waiting. I've only a wife who doesn't realize I'm just a big, overgrown boy.

Why don't they do something at that? I've been here a minute already. I should be starting for town. They ought to know they cannot keep a busy man up in the air this way. Up in the air! That's a hot one. No matter the situation, I can always joke.

* * *

What a sucker I was to go whizzing about in this thing. I'm always a push-over for something idiotic. It seems made of a few pieces of twine, an old skate strap, Confederate money and some of Aunt Ida's cast-off lace. That young fellow in front rather looks like Gene Tunney right through here. You know, side view. There are only two people in the car behind. They have stopped right on a slope. I slope everything is going to be all right. It's a bum joke. But do I know what I'm doing?

* * *

I suppose my wife wonders why I don't come on down. She'll feel pretty bad when newsboys rush by screaming—Ux-tree! Uxtree! I suppose they are spreading a net below. I can't even jump off a curb without biting my tongue. But it will be my luck to get my foot caught in the take off and dangle in the air. And my new fountain pen and everything falling out of my pockets. Headline: "Firemen Lasso Roller Coaster Dangler."

* * *

The lady in front has quieted down and gazes unperturbed at the crowds. She should have brought along her knitting. O, I suppose anyway they've just run out of electricity for the moment. I'll suggest that to the lady so she won't worry. "It may be madam, they have just run out of electricity." She replied: "So what?" Still snippy, eh? I'm always shooting off my kisser at the wrong time. My pan is closed from now on. What would Lincoln do in a situation such as this? Remind me to study electrical engineering when I get back to earth. And dust off the chimney corner chair. If I ever get to it, I'll give it a rocking it will remember. At my age, zipping up and down in a Coney Island roller coaster. Anybody want to patty cake with the 89-year-old nit-wit? See, I'm not scared. Like fun I'm not. I'll sue the company, that's what. O, Nathan Burkan!

* * *

The young men are talking to the lady in front. "Isn't it fun?" they ask. And she says, "Lots." That's editing copy right down to the bone. One stingy word, and she is all washed up. She'd make a good wife for someone. Speaking of wives, I'm certainly glad I didn't persuade mine to come along. Imagine her here, after a long coaxing, and this happening.

* * *

Zip, we have started up again like a flash! And my neck was almost unhinged. My side hurts. Suppose a big crowd will be waiting at the bottom to applaud. I'll be nonchalant. Here we are. Nobody has noticed a thing wrong. Facing death bravely and not even a cheer. Even my wife has not looked up from her book. I expected her to be in the middle of the street praying and wringing her hands.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Maybe you don't approve of prize fights. Theoretically, I don't, either. Barbaric affairs. Yet I go to them, sometimes, and for a strange reason. Not to see one brute mauling another, but just to get courage!

For there's more than mauling in a prize fight. There's real forcing of spirit as well as flesh—the forcing of spirit to carry on, in face of punishment, in face of cowardice, in face of weariness and discouragement.

See that man, slugged into insensibility, sprawled like a dead thing across the floor! Body and brain gone blotto. Only the heaving of the battered, bloody flesh to prove he's alive, and the referee standing over him counting—

ONE! TWO! THREE!

Just 10 counts and he's out.

FOUR! FIVE! SIX!

Something's happening in that pile of meat. Something's stirring, tightening. But how can it? That man's done for. Nothing matters, nothing can possibly matter, to a body as beaten as that. Nothing on earth can penetrate his slugged darkness.

But something is!

SEVEN! EIGHT!

He's dragging himself together! He's arching his back! He's crawling up on his knees, swaying, fumbling, tongue lolling, head hanging, eyes still blank; but up he comes, and up—

N-I-N-E! TEN!!

He's on his feet! He's fighting! HE DIDN'T TAKE THE COUNT!

Savage and sickening? Yes! But splendid, too! Something never to be forgotten. There's more than brute beating brute. There's Man, beating himself—beating the yellowness and the agony in himself.

There's that everlasting mystery and miracle—spirit battling on when body and brain have quit; spirit forcing demoralized flesh to STAND ON ITS FEET AND FIGHT!

That's why I go to prize fights—to get the courage to do that myself. For many's the time I'm near taking the count! When I think of the wasted years with all their blundering, and my dead boy, and my empty home, and the lonely trail ahead—I WANT TO FLOP!

I want to say "to hell with courage! I'm sick of punishment. What's the use of it all? I'm going to quit!"

Many's the time I've said that—sprawled in the darkness, with all the fight slugged out of me, and Life, that hard-boiled old referee, counting time over me.

Yet always, just before the final count, something has yanked me up off the floor, hurled me back into the battle again. Something in myself. What was it? I don't know. Call it pride, or call it spirit. One name's as good as another. Whatever it is, it's stronger than brain and stronger than body. It hangs on when both of them let go.

Maybe it's God—that little spark in all of us that makes us men instead of hunks of mud? Perhaps. I only know this—we've got it! And it's there when everything else is gone.

There, for you and me both, stranger. Both of us down, many a time, with our faces to the floor, wanting to quit.

DON'T!

Yes, I know you're slugged. You're down. But you're not out, yet! Draw yourself together! Open your eyes! Scramble to your knees! Hang on to that something in you—AND GET ON YOUR FEET, AND FIGHT!

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Music

In music there are voices not of earth;
Such soaring harmony
As only in celestial spheres has birth,
And mounts triumphant, free.

Tonight across the world, as music creeps
Upon the moonlight's tide,
Each mocking thought of pain and sorrow sleeps,
Each grief is swept aside.

And now the sweet, ecstatic melodies
In floods of sound advance,
To bear the soul across untraveled seas
On beauty's wide expanse.

Ah, music, whisper softly in my ear;
Awake no thought of day;
Lap me in wonder with your voices clear;
Charm every hurt away.

Text For Today If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates in thy land which the Lord thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother.
—Deuteronomy, xv:7.

Credit Leniency Needed

Manufacturers Assert Bankers Have It in Their Power
To Start the Wheels of Industry.

By JULIUS G. BERENS
Financial Editor, New York American.

THREE THOUSAND businessmen can't be wrong!

That many manufacturers, located in the Cleveland trade area, have declared that CREDIT LENIENCY on the part of bankers is URGENTLY REQUIRED and MERITED.

A survey of businessmen was undertaken by the banking and industrial committee of the Fourth Federal Reserve District, comprising Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Kentucky, and a part of West Virginia. A consensus of opinion of businessmen was sought on the need and advisability of greater credit extension, especially among small business enterprises.

Replies were so unanimous that the district committee, comprising outstanding industrialists and BANKERS, was moved to report:

> "It is our conclusion that it lies WITHIN THE POWER OF THE BANKERS to make a great and important contribution toward improvement in present business conditions."

The committee learned from the 3,000 manufacturers:

> "There is a vast amount of productive business available, particularly to the small manufacturers within the district, IF BANKING ACCOMMODATIONS CAN BE EXTENDED TO FINANCE SUCH PRODUCTIVE BUSINESS."

THE banking fraternity has persisted in the claim that the supply of credit is "sufficient."

The supply is more than sufficient, but it is USELESS in the VAULTS of banks.

It can and should be EMPLOYED.

An impartial committee comprising some of their own kind has reported that "it lies within the power of bankers" to start the wheels of industry humming.

Are the doubtful bankers convinced by the Cleveland survey?

Do they appreciate the grand opportunity for making a frontal attack on the depression by greater liberality, in proper channels, in credit extension?

The "right kind of push," the Cleveland committee reported, will reverse the downward path of business.

Bankers alone can supply this push. They have objected to the government exercising the functions of banking, but they do not exercise those functions themselves.

LIQUIDITY is the natural objective of every banker, but a condition of improper liquidity is an economic shame. Let the Cleveland committee explain:

> "Stagnation of production seems to have increased in step with the liquidity of banking resources; an end must be reached in the progressive increase of these two factors if we are to make any beginning of industrial recovery."

A new attitude of "credit leniency" as a step toward starting general business revival was URGENTLY RECOMMENDED by the committee of industrialists and bankers. All financial institutions in the Fourth Federal Reserve District were informed of the committee's findings and its recommendations.

Three thousand businessmen can't be wrong.

Let the bankers FALL INTO LINE with the anti-depression forces!

Three Sisters

By Winifred Black

Rather a late breakfast they were having, the three sisters, but it was Saturday morning, and nobody had anything special to do for the day, so there they were in their sunny breakfast room at the top of the house, eating French toast, crisp slices of bacon, raspberries and cream and coffee.

Plenty of coffee! Clear and brown and fragrant, it was served in nice old-fashioned China cups, with little, thin delicate spoons of real silver.

The toast was served on a little old-fashioned platter that belonged to the great-great-grandmother of the three sisters. It was a wedding present for the great-great-grandmother, and the three sisters are very fond of it. They never let anybody wash that platter but one of themselves, so you may know how much they think of it!

It's a delightful place—that breakfast room—but a modern decorator would call it a horror. It doesn't belong to any particular period.

Grandma's tea table is in the corner of the room. There's a good-sized bridge table, all ready to be used. There are newspaper racks and magazine racks. There are plants in bloom on the window sills.

In one corner of the room is a gilded cage, with a pair of canaries keeping house in it. In the other corner are a pair of love birds, in a quaint Chinese cage of wood, and a great silver Persian cat lies on a black velvet cushion and blinks her jade-green eyes at the sun.

What good times those three sisters do have!

One of them is an invalid, but you'd never know it unless you saw her try to walk. She's as pink and white as a girl, and she has the jolliest laugh you ever heard.

The three sisters read aloud to each other and they're always deep in the very newest novel, or the very latest biography.

They have dozens of friends and everybody tries to think up some excuse to be invited to breakfast up there in the sun-flooded room that looks out all over the city below.

No, they're not rich—the three sisters. They have a modest little income between them, and one of them is a teacher of English in a very smart private school, so they get on very nicely, thank you.

One of them is a widow, but the other two have never married at all. They're always joking about it, and no one ever thinks of calling them old maids.

They are just human beings who happen to be kind, friendly, intelligent, interesting women.

Sometimes when I hear ambitious mamas planning for the future of their daughters, and see these mamas scheming and fussing around to marry those daughters off and get them "settled in life," I think of the three sisters and their comfortable, pleasant life together in the old house at the top of the hill; and somehow I can't feel sorry for them at all, even if their mama was not clever enough to marry them off to the right kind of men.

"Tweet, tweet, tr-r-r-r-ee-ee-ee." That's one of the canaries making a few remarks, and I think, from his accent, that he is of German descent.

I wonder if he ever dreams of the Black Forest and wishes he was there; or does he rather like the sunny room, and the view of the city, and even the little gilt cage where he lives.
